INTRODUCING BULOVA PRECISIONIST

THE WORLD'S MOST ACCURATE WATCH
WITH A CONTINUOUSLY SWEEPING SECOND HAND

PRECISIONIST
CHAMPLAIN COLLECTION

Most quartz watches are accurate to 15 seconds a month -
Bulova Precisionist is accurate to 10 seconds a year.

The key is Precisionist's unique three-prong quartz crystal, which produces a vibration frequency of 262,144 kilohertz (kHz), eight times greater than the usual two-prong crystal and the highest of any watch available today. And, the innovative design of the Precisionist movement reduces the effects of temperature variation without using a high maintenance thermo-regulating integrated circuit.

The result is a watch that is extraordinarily precise, yet so easy to operate.

Caught Lohanded

Thanks again, Maxim, for making my day! First Milla Jovovich, then Olivia Munn, now Lindsay Lohan. How can you get any better? Lindsay has been one of my favorite actresses since I saw her in The Parent Trap. Then she became one of my first crushes when I saw Freaky Friday! This has to be the best issue of Maxim I've ever seen!

Daniel Agundiz Fort Stockton, TX

Dude, she was, like, 16 in Freaky Friday. Oh...nice try, Chris Hansen. There's no way we're falling for that one. Again.

Writer's Road Block

I'm a student at UC San Diego, and this summer I started driving between San Diego and L.A. The drive gets boring, and I can get drowsy. The only thing that keeps me awake is the Maxim magazine in my car. One look at your beautiful women and I'm wide-awake. Thank you for giving me the chance to read every month's issue on the road.

Ayk San Diego, CA

PS: I wrote this while driving. "Ayk"? We're pretty sure that's what you'll be screaming when you hit the guardrail. Good luck!

Tug Job

I love Maxim, but since I work on a tugboat in the Bering Sea in the summer, I can't get a subscrip-

Bracket Racket

Regarding "The Ultimate Bracket Battle" in your NFL preview [September], sirs: You stated that the '88 Colts were the AFC champions. This is wrong for several reasons. First, the '88 Colts were the NFL champions

Herbie just blew a gasket.

AWESOME GRIPE OF THE MONTH

Whoever wrote the Tech Tonics story [IStuff, September] needs to do their research. If they knew anything at all about the current RC helicopter scene, they would know it isn't for "old men." The hottest pilots on Earth are young guns. Do your research before you flame the hottest talent around. The "Air Bud" is a joke compared to state-of-the-art helis. What moron wrote this? Fire him, as he just totally shamed your rag. Get it right or die.

A guy wakes up after an epic night of drinking and notices two rings around his pecker: one red and the other brown. Horrified, he goes to the doctor, who takes a sample and comes back in the room. He says, "I have some good news and some bad news. The good news is that the red circle is lipstick." The guy hollers, "Hell, yeah!" The doctor continues: "The bad news is that the brown one is Skoal." Greg Ingram

Once Bitten

A shark and his son go looking for a snack. The father says, "I'm going to teach you how to catch a human. First you raise your fin out of the water and start circling, then you go in and eat them."

"Why circle them?" asks the son.

The father replies, "They taste better without shit in them."

Ring My Bell

Twelve monks are to be ordained. For their final test, they must line up nude while a topless dancer performs. Each monk has a small bell attached to his privates and is told that if the bell rings, he'll fail.

The girl dances before the first candidate and gets no reaction. She moves down the line, with the same response until the final monk. As she dances, his bell rings and falls to the ground.

Ashamed, he bends down to pick it up...and the other 11 bells go off.

CIRCUS MAXIMUS

A MAXIM VIEW OF THE WORLD

MY FIRST TIME:

rebecca marshall

Before you watch this Canadian cutie brave a bevy of deadly traps in Saw 3D, read up on some of her more memorable firsts.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY BRIE CHILDERS

FIRST SORE THROAT

I had to do some audio redubbing for Saw 3D, but the whole thing was just screaming. You have to watch video of your scene and time your screaming, like, "OK, one short scream and two long screams!" The traps in this installment are the biggest and goriest by far, so there's a lot of screaming.

FIRST FOREIGN TRIP

Cuba, when I was a kid. I remember leaving the resort, and an old woman kept looking at me. Then she came up and tried to touch my lips. It was weird till I realized she had never seen lip gloss, so I gave her mine. I've been back since as an adult, and no one has tried to touch my lips.

FIRST AUDITION

It was for the role of Helen in Troy with Brad Pitt. I had just come in from Toronto. I had nothing, just $80 in my pocket. All these girls were auditioning in, I don't want to say togas, but, like, drapey dresses. I came in with ripped jeans and a T-shirt. I was the modern-day Helen of Troy!

FIRST RACY ROLE

On the show Threshold I played an alien stripper named Candy Cane. I infected Peter Dinklage and turned him into an alien. I had a death scene where he's supposed to be hit by a lamp, but I was underneath him in bed, and it kept hitting me instead. After my mom saw it, she was like, "Wow."

Saw 3D hits theaters
October 29.

CR-Z
SPORT | HYBRID

EVERYTHING A HYBRID IS. AND ISN'T.

Introducing the sport hybrid. Hybrids are all the rage, as they should be. Efficiency and economy are more important now than ever. But at Honda, we weren't about to turn our back on hairpin turns and manual gearboxes. So we designed a hybrid that seemingly defies logic. One that embraces the driving experience most hybrids ignore. The result is certainly a hybrid. But also obviously something else altogether. For more, visit cr-z.honda.com.

POINTLESS ACHIEVEMENTS OF PEOPLE WITH WAY TOO MUCH TIME ON THEIR HANDS.

1 GOOGLE SAP

British "hiker" Matthew Partridge is "walking" the length of Great Britain—all 1,200 miles of it—via Google Maps Street View. "I can't be bothered with all the training, planning, and hardships of actually doing the walk," he said. The lazy sod plans to wrap up his trek in 100 hours over 10 days, by which point he'll go back to googling "Queen Elizabeth" and "beaver shot."

Degree of difficulty: 1

Degree of lameness: 10

2 WALKMAN

It took 859 days, but on August 9 of this year, British army vet Ed Stafford completed his goal of walking the entire length of the Amazon, all 6,000-plus miles of it. He did it to bring the world's attention to the depletion of the rain forest, but we think it mostly brought crotch rot to his balls.

Degree of difficulty: 10

Degree of lameness: 6

3 DRIVEN CRAZY

This summer an avid fan of conservative icon Ayn Rand decided to shout his love of the author such that it could be read only via Google Earth. To do this Nick Newcomen drove his car 12,328 miles in 30 days to "write" READ AYN RAND, plotting his course using a GPS tracking device. If this sounds utterly tedious, you should try reading Atlas Shrugged.

Degree of difficulty: 4

Degree of lameness: 7

4 BASS AWKARDS

Italian Michele Santelia has typed a whopping 68 books from finish to start. Yup, from The Odyssey to Macbeth, he typed them all backward. Because doing it straight would be a total waste of time.

Degree of difficulty: 5

Degree of lameness: 8

5 JUST OUR TYPE

On December 7, 1998, after 16 years at his typewriter, Aussie Les Stewart finished typing all the numbers from one to one million...in words. Yeah, as in: nine hundred seventy-eight thousand, six hundred fifty-three. Not impressed? He used only one finger. World's worst finger bang.

POISON FRONTMAN AND REALITY TV SUPERSTAR BRETT MICHAELS BREAKS DOWN HOW TO BE A COMPELLING SUBJECT WHEN THE CAMERAS START ROLLING.

BERELATABLE

The key isn't whether you're a "good" or "bad" person; it's that there's something about you that's relatable. You don't always have to be lovable. On the first season of Rock of Love it probably wasn't my smartest move to make out with three women. Three women and myself. So, yes, technically it was a foursome. For lust's sake, great move. As far as being lovable goes, not the best move.

exactly how to stay out of your face, they won't be able to capture the reality. Don't fuckin' ask me to do something over. I'll put it this way: My acting skills are limited. I'm not gonna put Bobby De Niro out of work anytime soon.

GET PHYSICAL

Put somebody in a physical challenge and the real, raw person comes out pretty quickly. You see how they handle being angry and if they are a loyal person or a backstabber.

THEN GET DRUNK

At some point you have to forget about the cameras all around you. I had to get drunk. If you're doing a dating show, I absolutely suggest getting some alcoholic beverages floating around. You don't want to go in there so hammered that you make a complete idiot of yourself, but taking a little edge off and being fun, that's great. That's what life's supposed to be.

THE WORLD SERIES' FOULEST BALLS

A LOOK BACK AT AMERICA'S FAVORITE PASTIME: DOING STUPID THINGS IN AND AROUND BASEBALL STADIUMS.

1920

BROOKLYN DODGERS VS.
CLEVELAND INDIANS

► Hall of Fame pitcher Rube Marquard was arrested before Game 4 of the World Series for scalping six tickets for $350. He was slapped with a whopping fine of $3.80! And in case you think he got off easy, that would be $40 in today's money.

1933

NEW YORK GIANTS VS.
WASHINGTON SENATORS

► Senators left fielder Heinie Manush ended an argument with umpire Charley Moran by grabbing Moran's elastic-band bow tie and snapping it back at the ump's neck. Moran tossed him, but not before Manush responded, "Nyuk, nyuk, nyuk!"

1961

CINCINNATI REDS VS.
NEW YORK YANKEES

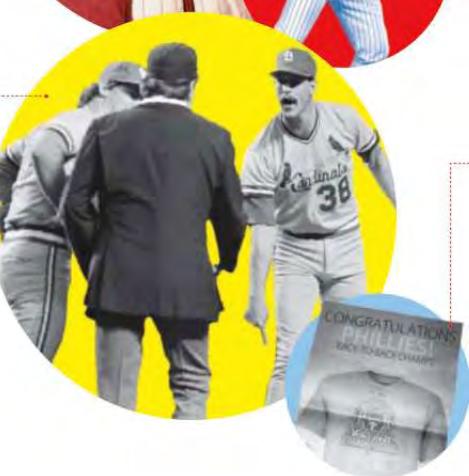

► As it was the height of the Cold War, Pennsylvania Supreme Court justice Michael Musmanno sent a letter to Reds manager Fred Hutchinson pleading with him to change his team's name, worried what a headline like "Reds Defeat Yanks!" might do to national morale. No worries: The Yanks beat the Commie bastards.

1985

ST. LOUIS CARDINALS VS.
KANSAS CITY ROYALS

► With the Cards up three games to two and leading in the ninth inning, umpire Don Denkinger botched a call at first base, allowing the Royals to come back and tie the series. Then, in Game 7, Denkinger tossed Cards' ace Joaquin Andujar for arguing calls. Andujar, per league regulations, destroyed a clubhouse toilet in response.

1990

CINCINNATI REDS VS.
OAKLAND A'S

► What with the Nazi memorabilia, homophobia, and boozing, Reds owner Marge Schott wasn't exactly known for her sharp mind. Before Game 2, Schott raised the bar by dedicating the game to U.S. troops in the "Middle West." Get home safe... from Kansas, brave soldiers.

1992

ATLANTA BRAVES VS.
TORONTO BLUE JAYS

► With America and Canada facing off for the first time in the fall classic, the U.S. Marine Corps Color Guard made a funny by carrying the Canadian flag upside down. When the series returned to Toronto, maple-syrup-swilling vendors did brisk business selling fans "upside down" versions of old glory. Pretty original, eh?

2000

NEW YORK YANKEES VS.
NEW YORK METS

► Like Buffy the Vampire Slayer letting loose on a vampire batter, Yankees ace Roger Clemens hurled a jagged shard of Mike Piazza's bat at him in a display of what was definitely not a case of 'roid rage. Because the Rocket never juiced. Are we clear on this?

2009

NEW YORK YANKEES VS.
PHILADELPHIA PHILLIES

► In a rousing show of home-team love, The Philadelphia Inquirer ran a full-page ad screaming, "Congratulations, Phillies! Back-to-Back Champs." Problem was, the Phils lost. Inquirer staffers apparently missed "climax control" condom day at Citizens Bank Park.

GRADY SIZEMORE

The skinny: Seminude pics of the Indians star were stolen from his girlfriend's e-mail.

HOTTIE BODYGUARDS

FORGET "BIG BLACK" BOYKIN-GIRLS IN THE CELEBRITY SECURITY GAME CAN BACK YOUR ASS UP, TOO!

> Think the cutie in VIP with Rihanna is her BFF? Nope, that's her femme fatale bodyguard, and she will crush you if you take another step. More and more female celebs are adding sexy security to their posses. "It's about concealment," says Elijah Shaw, CEO of Icon Services, who trains a bevy of lady protectors. "Female bodyguards can blend in and go where male security can't." Icon alum Joanna Torrens, 27, says it's more about brains than brawn. "I'm not just there to be a pretty face. I keep an eye out on paparazzi, escape routes, traffic patterns." And, presumably, creepy Maxim editors.

Will we ever be able to play games with our brains?

Eric Brawn, via e-mail

That rhymes! Also, yes, we can already. Here's how the Brain-Gate Neural Interface System will put your thumbs to pasture.

1. First, a 4 mm microchip is implanted in the motor cortex, the area of the brain that controls voluntary movement.
2. Electrodes on the chip detect the nerve impulses your brain usually sends to your limbs.
3. Those impulses are sent through a cable to a nearby computer, which translates the signals based on pattern recognition ("move thumb sideways" has a signature, for example).
4. Those translated directives are then given to an object in the nearby game, in this case a Pong paddle. Awesome! (Unfortunately, you have to be paraplegic to use it. Still, though...awesome!)

FAST FACTS

TASTY TIDBITS ABOUT TURKEY DAY!

250 million turkeys were raised in the United States in 2009.

Turkey, Texas (pop. 456) is the most populous of the three towns in the nation named after the bird.

709 million pounds of cranberries were produced last year.

The first Thanksgiving feast occurred in Newfoundland in 1578, not in Plymouth in 1621.

The USDA advises storing the raw turkey, duck, and chicken no longer than two days before cooking a turducken.

DUMB QUESTION OF THE MONTH

CAN YOU DIVE INTO A POOL OF GOLD COINS LIKE SCROOGE McDUCK?

John McDonald, Irving, TX

> SURE, but it might be painfully similar to diving headfirst into concrete, according to chemist David Lever at Ohio Wesleyan University. The coins would lock together and form a solid surface that, if you chose to dive into, would snap your neck. It's probably not safe to keep your life savings in a giant vault with a money symbol on it, either.

▲ THE AGE AT WHICH YOUR PERSONALITY IS SET FOR LIFE, SAYS A RECENT STUDY FROM THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA. SO THAT MUST BE WHY WE STILL WANT TO HAVE SEX WITH CHEETARA FROM THUNDERCATS, RIGHT? RIGHT!?

YOU DIDN'T ASK, BUT WE'RE TELLING YOU ANYWAY

KNOWLEDGE YOU'LL WISH YOU NEVER HAD!

> ACCORDING TO THE DATING EXPERTS AT OkCupid, iPhone owners score more tall than users of any other cell phone. Male iPhone owners averaged 10 sexual partners, and lady Apple fans averaged an impressive 12.3. Using an Android phone? Sucks to be you and your measly mean of six boning buddies.

NO PAIN, HUGE GAINS

THE WARMUP THAT'LL MAKE YOU STRONGER, FASTER, AND INJURY-FREE. GET READY TO RULE DIESEL-DOM.

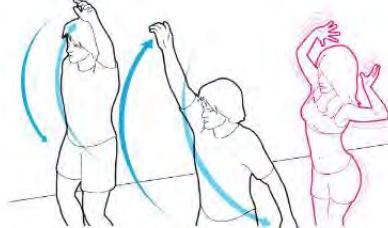

→ Everything you know about stretching is wrong. According to research, static (standing still) stretching before a workout actually makes you weaker and more prone to injury. "Doing it just before exercising is potentially worse than starting cold," says David "Dave T." Tebidor, director of Velocity Sports Performance in N.Y.C., who trains pro athletes. Static drills elongate muscles but don't prep them for the intense contracting that occurs in a workout or competition. "To get them ready—and to get the most out of your gym session—you need to get blood flowing and work on range of motion. Still stretch, but only on off days." Here's Tebidor's preworkout routine.

THERE AND BACKS

Run 25 yards, reaching near-sprint speed. Return running backward. Do two sets to open warmup, then two sets to close it. Focus on: Posture, slowly increasing speed, swinging arms, not wiping out while running backward.

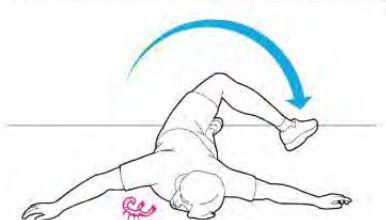

LONG ARM SWINGS

Stand with feet shoulder width apart and swing arms up and down in the air, like you just don't care. Somebody say, "Ho, I feel stupid!" Focus on: Shoulders, neck, extending your spine.

ARM HUGS

Saddest back pats ever: Swing arms quickly in front, wrapping them around your back. Focus on: Opening up your chest, shoulders, and midback; loving yourself.

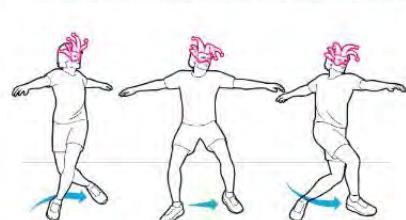

PRONE SCORPIONS

Lie flat on your beer belly, arms extended. Swing right leg over body toward left hand. Toe-tap, then swing leg back. Repeat with left leg. Protect ya neck: Keep your mug close to the ground and face opposite direction of foot. Focus on: Opening hips and hammies.

FORWARD SKIPS

High knee skips with opposite arm swings. Go 25 yards. Turn; skip back to start. Be sure to yell, "Whee-e-e-e-e-e" while skipping. Focus on: Posture, extending your lower back. Do not focus on the giggling gym rats.

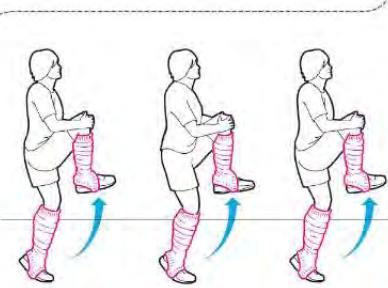

CARIOCAS

These are sideways, alternate-foot crossover runs. Do them for about 25 yards with arms extended. Then come back facing same direction. Do two sets. Focus on: Working your hip rotation; opening up your chest, shoulders, and upper back.

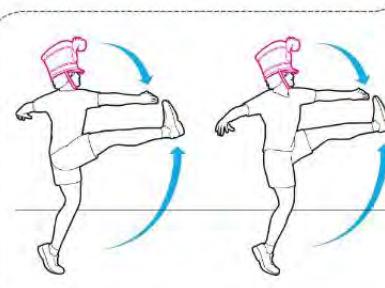

QUADRUPED ABDUCTIONS

Get on hands and knees, facing floor. Keeping knee bent, lift up one leg like you're peeing on a hydrant, dog boy. Do 10 on each leg. Focus on: Opening up hips and lower back, marking your territory.

HIGH KNEE HUGS

Walk 25 yards, and with each step pause, lift leg, and grab knee, pulling into chest. Extend planted foot up (on toe), knee hugger. Focus on: Elongating your spine, working lower back, maintaining balance through posture.

STRAIGHT LEG MARCH

March 25 yards. For each step, extend arm straight out and swing your same-side leg up, trying to touch toe. Keep arms and legs straight, cheater. Focus on: Your hammies, keeping spine straight, not looking like a Nazi.

HOMETOWN:

What's the worst/most awesome pickup line you've ever heard?
One guy actually said to me, "If I was Peter Pan, you'd be my happy thought!"

ASHLEY ANN

HOMETOWN:
Nashville, TN

You live in Florida. Ever seen an alligator?
Of course! I used to beg my dad to let me go swimming in the Everglades. He was like, "Are you an idiot? Do you not see those alligators sunbathing?" But they don't want a piece of me, trust me.

LISA

HOMETOWN:
Aventura, FL

How do you feel about girl-on-girl action?
Sometimes you just want to kiss your girlfriend! I remember on my birthday, my friend came up to me and kissed me. It wasn't like we were trying to get attention!

KAITLYNN

HOMETOWN:
Portsmouth, NH

What's the weirdest experience of your life?
My friend and I went to Coachella this year, but we booked our motel for the wrong dates! We ended up staying with the girl at the reception desk and her boyfriend, mother, brother, and three kids for $75 a night. But the music was great!

DANIELLE

HOMETOWN:
Chicago, IL

Did you ever have a run-in with the Chicago system of justice?
I had to get a liquor license for a restaurant I was opening. I tried the ol' Chicago cash-under-the-table trick, but it didn't work. In the end I did it the old-fashioned legal way.

MAXIM'S PERFECT 10

From the East Coast to the Left Coast, from the Dirty South to the Cleaner North (hey, we didn't invite the comparison), thousands of lovely ladies entered this year's Hometown Hotties competition. What's the worst job you've ever had?
I worked at a Jet Ski store. I was the only girl there, and the guys would pick on me. They would throw me off the backs of the Jet Skis and, like, try to drown me. But in a nice, flirty, middle-school way.

KASSANDRA
HOMETOWN:
Los Angeles, CA

How was your first Maxim shoot?
It was amazing. Though I had sand in places you don't even want to know. Or maybe you do. We even had some on-lookers, these little boys. We said we'd take photos with them if they'd stop checking us out!

LINDSEY
HOMETOWN:
Murrieta, CA

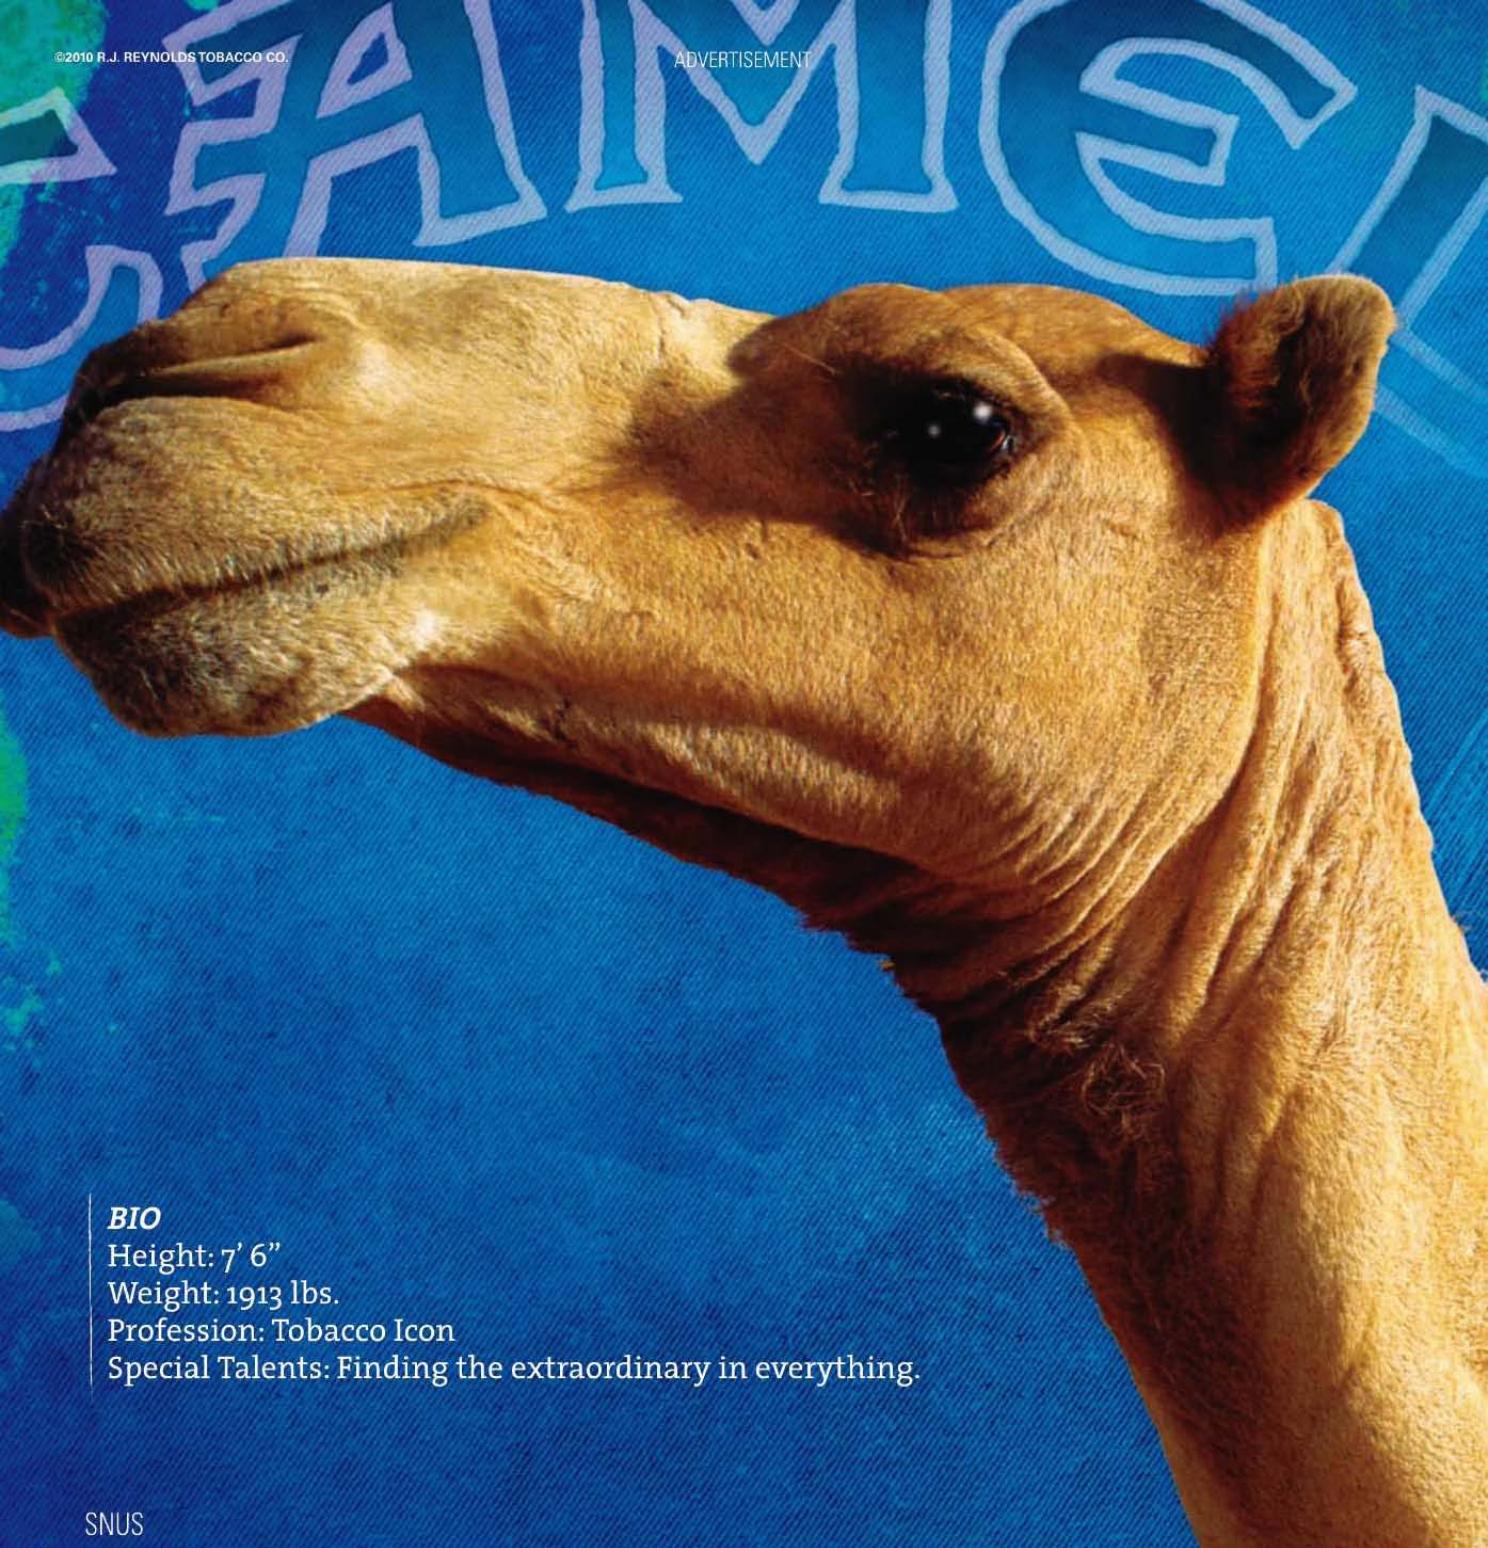

What's the wildest thing you've ever done?
I got to go on a ride-along with rally car driver Ken Block. It was so scary. He was just hauling ass and doing crazy donuts and turns. He had to replace his tires every four runs.

MELANIE
HOMETOWN:
New York, NY

What's the best date you've ever been on?
This year a guy took me on a private plane from New York to Atlanta. Then we went to some strip club where a girl dropped these, like, 12-pound boobs in his lap. He was looking at me the whole time. It was cute.

AMANDA
HOMETOWN:
Louisville, KY

Ever been arrested?
No, but I did get a citation for jaywalking in Kentucky—it was ridiculous. I had to go to court, and the judge actually gave me community service! I had to wash windows in the middle of winter!

MAXIM BOURBON AWARDS

TIME TO GET DOWN WITH THE BROWN.

BEST FOR MIXING MAN DRINKS

MAKER'S 46

94 PROOF, $35

>When master distiller Kevin Smith told us he made a new Maker's recipe, we worried; that's a tough act to follow, Kevvy. But he crushed it. Like its forebear, 46 is still approachable and sweet. But thanks to seared French oak staves, it's stiffer—ideal for Manhattans and old-fashioned.

BEST FOR THE DESK DRAWER

PAPPY VAN WINKLES

90.4 PROOF, $100

>Peppery with a vanilla finish, Pappy V's superb sip epitomizes the rule that the more hillbilly the name, the better the brown. Two decades of aging makes this corn mash the most unique on the market. Every taste is a journey to classy town.

STAFF FAVORITE

HUDSON BABY BOURBON

92 PROOF, $40

>This micro outfit may have gone mega (recently bought by William Grant & Sons), but it still churns out the most approachable lip-smacking sauce on the shelf. With its clean caramel-corn and biscuit-dough notes, BB swills easy, so go slow, gulp boy.

BEST NEWCOMER

ANGEL'S ENVY

86.6 PROOF, $46

>This fall Lincoln Henderson, an inaugural member of the Kentucky Bourbon Hall of Fame who used to distill Woodford Reserve, went rogue and created his own micro batch. It lives up to the man's legend. Big and smooth, with an almost oatmeal cookie taste, plus hints of pipe tobacco.

BEST SINGLE BARREL

BLANTON'S ORIGINAL

93 PROOF, $50

>Blanton's was the first single barrel. In 1984 Elmer T. Lee felt a few of his casks were too tasty to mix, so he just bottled 'em and, bang! a new niche was born. (Sadly, Elmer never trademarked "single barrel." We expected more from a man named Elmer.) Taste: bold with toffee undertones.

BEST BARREL PROOF

GEORGE T. STAGG

143 PROOF, $70

>The alcohol content is so high it's illegal to take this combustible concoction on a plane. Even more amazing, it's still super-sippable, and it's the stuff distillers tip when they get together to swap stories. This white-hot heat stings the lips but has deep maple, citrus, and clove flavors.

BEST BOTTLE FOR DAD

WILLETT POT STILL RESERVE

94 PROOF, $50

>Willett is the closest thing to pre-Prohibition bourbon. It packs a wallop, but the butter, cedar, and lime notes soften the blow. This sauce, in the signature still-shaped bottle, is the gift for the old man.

BEST BARGAIN

JIM BEAM BLACK

86 PROOF, $20

>Just because the Beam folks figured out how to get you their tasty barrel-aged treats more cost-efficiently doesn't mean they must be relegated to the world of well drinks. Black is top-shelf stuff. It sports Beam's spiciness but swirls with heavy hints of brown sugar and leather. Perfect for the game-day flask.

FIVE THINGS YOU DON'T KNOW ABOUT BOURBON.

1 Bourbon is the first American-born booze. Congress declared it America's official distilled spirit in 1964.

2 It can be made anywhere in the U.S. but must be 51 percent corn and aged in charred oak. And no added flavors. Sorry, Jack Daniel's.

3 "Straight" means it was aged at least two years. Almost all whiskey is cut with H₂O to lower the proof. Uncut bourbon is labeled "barrel proof."

4 "Small batch" is a marketing ploy. Uncle Sam doesn't regulate the term (yet), so the actual batch could fill a Walmart and still be called small.

5 Distillers are artists. Each year they re-create the brand's flavor from hundreds of new, unique barrels. Drink up these masterpieces!

BUTTERNUTS BEER & ALE'S HEINWEISSE WEISSEBIER

Extend your summer into the coming snow season with this June-in-a-can wheat beer made by the geniuses behind Pork Slap pale ale. Sweet and grassy, this green bullet is the cleanest concoction we've gulped. Slug it and instantly drown your fall-winter blues.

Bar Trick File No. 27

MATERIALS NEEDED

- 4 quarters
- 1 dollar bill
- 1 beer bottle.

THE SETUP: Place the dollar bill on the mouth of the empty beer bottle and stack the four quarters in the middle.

1. Bet your friends that they can't remove the dollar bill with only one finger while keeping the quarters from falling off the bottle.

2. When you have sufficiently enjoyed their failure, step in and show 'em how it's done.

3. Lick the side of your index finger for some extra friction.

4. Swipe quickly down the end of the bill. With the help of your sticky slobber, the quarters will remain unmoved as the bill snaps out with ease. Collect winnings.

YOUR ONE-NIGHT STAND STARTS HERE

6:00 P.M. HAPPY HOUR

St. Regis Bar

Even if you're not racking at the hotel, crash this stately wood-paneled bar for cocktails. It boasts the best Bloody in the South and its own in-house bourbon. If any models are in town, they'll be giggling on the red leather couches.

8:00 P.M. SUSTENANCE

South City Kitchen

Think upscale Southern comfort food. Drink: The Hot Brown (mint julep with ginger, mint, and soda). Eat: Cornmeal Crisped Catfish (with stewed okra and tomatoes, mustard greens, scallion remoulade). Sides: Grits, butterbean succotash.

10:00 P.M. BOOZE SESSION

The BookHouse Pub

This is one of Atlanta's best gastropubs, but the food isn't the draw here—it's the dizzying craft-brew menu. Also dizzying: the beer-loving creative-class cuties and tattooed hipster honeys who pack this place nightly. Bonus: Outdoor patio.

Nearby: The owners of BookHouse also run the Drunken Unicorn across the parking lot, one of the nation's best ear-bleeding underground music clubs.

2:00 A.M. NIGHTCAP(S)

The Highlander

Scuzzy, awesome dive bar in a friggin' strip mall. Go for the cheap booze and canned beer. Stay because it's open till three and has a giant air hockey table.

3:00 A.M. LATE-NIGHT GUT BOMB

Gladys Knight and Ron Winans' Chicken & Waffles

Yep, that Gladys Knight. (Ron was a gospel singer.) Once you get over the R&B kitsch, order the Midnight Train: four Southern-fried jumbo chicken wings and one original waffle. Wash down with the house sweet tea.

BUILDING THE PERFECT LIQUOR CABINET

BULLDOG GIN

In 2003 a Wall Street banker standing in the rain one day said to hell with bonuses and started Bulldog. This quadruple-distilled upstart has more than earned its top-shelf status. Gin facts: (1) That evergreen smell is the main ingredient: juniper berries. (2) In the 1600s folks spiked gin with turpentine.

THE ROCK'N'ROLL THRONE.

FAMILY GUYS (from left):

Thanks to 2008's smash Only by the Night, Kings of Leon became one of the world's biggest bands. But superstardom hasn't made them immune to pigeon crap, as a recent incident in St. Louis proved. Jared Followill, the band's bassist, wiped away the poop and told us about their latest album, Come Around Sundown.

Will you be disappointed if this album isn't a huge success?

I know we shouldn't be, but truthfully, yeah. We feel like we made a better record, but it probably won't be as big. If it's not a huge commercial success, it'll probably gain back the critics who thought the last one wasn't as good. It's win-win. The last thing we wanted was to make a bad record. Then we'd all have to punch ourselves in the faces.

How is being an arena band?

Show are more fun in a club, but everything else is much better. The riders, the backstage area... The feel is cleaner and nicer. You don't feel like you have the flu all the time.

What can you have now that you couldn't have before?

Tons of stuff. We travel with a

Ping-Pong table. TVs everywhere. Right now we've got pay-per-view of the Oklahoma game. Anything we ask for gets done in about an hour. We're super spoiled.

You're only 23 and joined the band when you were 15. Do you feel like you lost a childhood?

It has to feel normal to me because it's me, but I know it's not normal at all. I dropped out of school and at 16 was touring Europe with the Strokes and Interpol, doing drugs and getting drunk. It was a weird time, but it was perfect. It scares me to say, but if I died now I couldn't complain.

Have you bought anything nuts?

We're not crazy. I got a Nissan GT-R supercar that's fun to drive. And I got a big-ass house in Nashville that's fun to hang in. I kind of feel like the little boy in Blank Check.

Tell us about being crapped on and stopping in the middle of a show.

There were pigeons in the rafters in St. Louis. I was told if crap got in my eye, it could blind me. On the third song, management pulled us. It was lose-lose; we were a laughingstock either way. We'd be singing "Use Somebody," and I'd be covered in pigeon shit. That's not badass rock'n'roll. That's just humiliating.

RATED TV/FILM

SCARED CHIKLIS

NO ORDINARY FAMILY'S MICHAEL CHIKLIS ON HIS EMBARRASSING EARLY ROLES AND MAINTAINING HIS ROCK-HARD ASS.

Everybody's been comparing this show to Heroes and The Incredibles, which must be annoying. Do you want to finally put those comparisons to rest? Yeah, it's an unfair comparison. There have been 475,000 cop shows, yet they'll make 10 new ones a year without even batting an eye. As far as superhero shows are concerned, I don't even think we've gotten to a dozen yet in TV history. No Ordinary Family is its own thing.

Your character has super strength. Do you spend crazy hours in the gym?

Well, he's a middle-aged everyman, so it's not appropriate for him to be Herculean. Just to survive this thing, I'm gonna need to stay fit and in shape, but I want to keep it accessible. At its core this is a family show more than anything else.

Your (male) costar Romany Malco said your butt is hard as a rock. What's up with that?

Romany has a tendency to pinch me down there once in a while. It's an odd thing.

Did you have any bad gigs early on in your career?

There are definite credits on my résumé I wish weren't there, and of course, you're gonna make me mention them, aren't you?

Of course.

Let me think. I was in a movie called Soldier. Oy. Not OK.

And the Miami Vice TV show?

If I remember correctly, I played an art thief. It was one of my first roles ever—a long time ago. I had to dress up in drag. Wait—I had to dress up like a Haitian woman to try to escape and get across the border, to get on a ship.

Did you get away?

No! Crockett busted me.

ZOMBIES ON TV

UNDEAD ARE TAKING OVER ON THE WALKING DEAD.

On Halloween Shawshank director Frank Darabont's frightfest about humans in a zombie apocalypse hits AMC. Here he tells us why to watch.

THE WALKING DEAD IS NO LAUGHING MATTER.

"This isn't a comedy. I loved Shaun of the Dead and Zombieland, but we're tapping into the scariest aspects of having corpses brought back to life and feeding on flesh, how living in that world can tear people apart emotionally."

THE STORY TRANSCENDS THE HORROR...

"Robert Kirkman, who created the comic book series, developed so many compelling characters. I hope people get invested in them and our story. TV brings so much room to develop the series beyond basic horror."

...BUT THAT DOESN'T MEAN THE HORROR IS LOST.

"I always say: If you're making a western, you need cowboy hats and six-shooters. We're making a zombie show, so we need to have ripping of flesh and zombie attacks. You can't not deliver that." —Matt Barone

ELYSE LEVESQUE

Syfy's sexiest star is back on Stargate Universe.

● As Chloe Armstrong on SGU, model turned actress Elyse Levesque mixes sexy and smarts as she fights in an epic battle for survival. Now the Canadian-born beauty is back for the second season, giving geeks across the galaxy something to smile about. Here's why we love her.

She'll fall for you!

I was shooting an ad in Taiwan, and they wanted me up in the air in a harness. The tiny Asian man who was supposed to pull the rope couldn't support my weight, and I came crashing down. I was in tears, and the crew just stared at me until the one person who spoke English said, "Model no cry."

She wants to be asked out! In Vancouver there's a ratio of seven girls to one guy, so it's super tough to meet men. The three years that I've lived here, I can't think of one time I was asked out! In the States men flirt, and it's refreshing. I'm like, "I still have it going on!"

She likes dorks!

Sci-fi knowledge is definitely not a deal breaker. If a guy is interested in it, he's probably super smart, and that's attractive. I always used to fall for the dark, brooding, bad-boy type, but that's gradually changing.

Stargate Universe airs Tuesdays at 9 P.M. on Syfy.

RATED DVD/MUSIC

THE TIME- TRAVELING CAR

"We picked a DeLorean because we wanted the folks in 1955 to think it was from space. We spent lots of time thinking of numerology that felt poetic. Like, 1.21 gigawatts rolls off your tongue better than 785.53. Same with 88 miles per hour. Rather than sounding like a bunch of tech talk, they're numbers the audience remembered."

THE OTHER MARTY

"Eric Stoltz was originally cast as Marty. Why did I recast the part? I realized that as great an actor as Eric is, his comedy sensibilities weren't the same as mine. It was a very painful thing, and I felt horrible about it. The fault was totally mine as a novice director. There are a couple of clips of his scenes on the DVD. This edition has it all."

BACK TO BACK

AS BACK TO THE FUTURE HITS 25 YEARS, DIRECTOR ROBERT ZEMECKIS GIVES US 1.21 GIGAWATTS OF INSIDE INFO.

THE OVER-WORKED STAR

"Michael J. Fox was shooting Family Ties during the day, so we shot the entire movie at night except for on weekends. When people look at films that are wildly entertaining to watch, the comment you get is, 'That must have been really fun to make!' Back to the Future really wasn't fun to make at all, and it was a good thing. Michael was young and energetic. He's not singing, but that's him playing guitar."

THE SEXY MOM

"Lea Thompson playing Lorraine as this sex kitten made her scenes so hot. She went for it. I found it fascinating that the line, 'Are you telling me that my mother's got the hots for me?' was in every TV spot and ad. The marketing department must have known that concept would touch the world."

Back to the Future 25th Anniversary Edition hits shelves October 26.

TALES FROM THE STUDIO

THE STRAIGHT DOPE ON THE MONTH'S HOTTEST ALBUMS.

TOBY KEITH
BULLETS IN THE GUN
The country outlaw spills a round or two on his 14th album.

Where the magic happened:

"Nashville. Almost always Nashville. If I was in L.A., I wouldn't even know where to find a harmonica player. I'm sure they've got plenty, but in Nashville if you need one you can just make a phone call."

The key to writing lyrics:

"I get inspiration from bumper stickers, T-shirts, or people saying things backward—a mistake is a song. We were on motorcycles one day, and we passed a trailer park. One of my buddies said we should get back on the interstate. I was going to say we should go toward the neighborhood or the trailer park, but I said 'trailerhood' accidentally. As soon as I said it, I knew I had to write a song called 'Trailerhood.'

Sounds like a cross between: "Willie Nelson, Marshall Tucker Band, Charlie Daniels. I don't even know any contemporary country songs."

WEEZER HURLEY

The nerd-rock giants' frontman, Rivers Cuomo, reaches back for their eighth album.

Digging in the crates:

"We wanted to do something more for our core audience—unpolished, emotional rock. I was able to go back because I have all my old unproduced ideas on my computer now, ripped to iTunes. For 'Run Away' we pulled an idea from 1998."

Secret weapon: "Michael Cera and I played in a celebrity soccer match together. A few months later I saw him on Letterman talking about doing silent meditation at the same place I go to. We met up for lunch on a day we happened to be recording, so he came in on 'Hang On.' He's a pretty serious guitar player."

Our obsession during recording: "The band Sleigh Bells. We were blown away by the way their stuff sounded. We've been e-mailing with them but haven't had a chance to get in the studio yet."

RATED Q&A

Todd poses with the world's creepiest doll collection.

The King of the R-rating!

QA & TODD PHILLIPS

THE DEMENTED DIRECTOR OF ROAD TRIP, OLD SCHOOL, AND THE HANGOVER IS BACK WITH THE DARKLY HILARIOUS ROAD FLICK DUE DATE.

Your first feature was Road Trip, and your latest movie is Due Date, about two guys traveling cross-country. Are you a big fan of road movies?

Here's the thing: The plots of my movies sound generic, but we try to do a spin on them. When I do a movie, it's more about who has chemistry. Or antichemistry, in this case.

How did you decide to pair Robert Downey Jr. with Zach Galifianakis?

Zach is the funniest person I've ever met. He just sits down to eat lunch with you and you start laughing. And Downey's one of the greatest actors alive, so even though I thought it was a bit of a long shot, I sent him the script.

Most people didn't know about Zach until The Hangover, even though he's been doing comedy for a long time.

He actually read for Road Trip more than 10 years ago, for Tom Green's character, Barry. That would've been interesting. He has so much talent, but I always thought he wasn't quite used properly in movies. Then the role of Alan came up in The Hangover, and I realized Zach could crush it. I'd be happy to bring Zach into every movie I do forever, but you have to let him soar with other directors. It's like seeing your ex go out with other guys.

There's death, violence, and a masturbating dog in this movie. Will fans of "Todd Phillips movies" be thrown by how dark Due Date gets?

It does get a little dark, but we still have that masturbating dog. I think there's nothing more pure than masturbating.

In Road Trip you have a cameo as the guy who wanted to suck on Amy Smart's toes. In Old School you show up for an orgy. In The Hangover you're caught going down on a girl in an elevator. You really give yourself classy roles.

I only work in R-rated movies directed by Todd Phillips. Actually, Juliette Lewis is the same character in Due Date as she was in Old School, and I'm playing that guy who showed up to the gangbang again. In my mind they're the same couple, but in the legal departments at DreamWorks and Warner Bros., they're not.

What's up with Hangover 2?

I know sequels are perceived as a money grab, but we're doing it because we want to make a movie that's funnier and better than the first one. I'm treating it like the fucking Godfather II. A good portion of the movie takes place in Bangkok. I thought of Bangkok because what word means something the way "Vegas" means something?

Vegas means bad behavior and bad decisions, and Bangkok, to me, is a shadier and scarier version of that. It's going to get dark, and somebody's coming back in a body bag...I just don't know who it is yet. It's probably going to be me.

Will Mike Tyson be involved?

Mike texts me all the time. He's the greatest guy on the planet. I know he's had transgressions, but he's a different man these days. He's become a really close friend, and it's hard to say no to Mike. Let me put it that way.

NEW CAR. NEW START.

My Corolla is the first new car I've purchased. So it was a huge deal for me. It's the biggest investment I've ever made. It just feels like a really reliable, safe car. After I bought it, I drove the five-hour trip from my parents' house to my place in L.A. It was very peaceful, and I felt like I'm actually becoming an adult. You know what I mean? X FACTOR

THE XBOX 360 KINECT IS A MOTION CONTROL GAME CHANGER.

The Wii has its WiiMote, and the PS3 has its ice cream cone joysticks. The motion controllers of this generation are just that: controllers. (Dramatic pause.) Until now. Microsoft's Kinect ($149) may be the last to join in the motion control gangbang, but it's seriously hung with some impressive controller-less credentials, like live streaming video chat, biometric facial mapping, and full-body movement and voice recognition. Which makes it less of a fun-for-a-while gimmick (cough, Wii, cough) and more of a revolution in how we interact with our consoles. So how do these fancy-sounding features make hands-free gaming on the 360 a reality and not a hyped-up mess? Consult our breakdown (right) and find out! And consult a physician about that erection. Dude, it's been more than four hours.

STRESS TESTS
Building on 10 years of Microsoft R&D, engineers trained the motion controls with 20 million clips of every conceivable human gesture, including "sexy hop-bounce."

1. A 3D IR projector fires out infrared beams that paint a depth map, essentially locating the distance of every object in front of it. Yes, your dinner table is 10 feet away! Amazing!

2. This lens is the receiver, taking in the raw data painted by the IR projector. The Xbox 360's software uses this information to create a map and determine your body's motion.

3. Just for fun, it also has a traditional camera that allows you to video-chat with other Kinect users on Xbox Live. Hands-free video sex chat, anyone?

4. Microsoft recorded thousands of hours of speech from across the U.S., ensuring that the four-mike system understands dozens of accents, even annoying ones (that's you, Boston).

MY CAMRY TREE

Once I got pregnant with my son we wanted to upgrade to something bigger for a family of four. We bought the 2005 Toyota Camry. We called it "Silver Bullet." Kinda felt like a step up for us. A little bit of luxury—but in our price range. :)

Los Angeles, 2006

I brought my son home from the hospital in my first Camry. My son is three now and I used to have to drive him to a class that was almost an hour away and she always got me there.

A lot of good memories in that car. Family outings, weekend trips, stuff like that. Silver Bullet was hard to let go of but it was funny—actually, my daughter had the hardest time letting go! She didn't understand that we were getting a new one. She loved the sound system and didn't know how we would listen to all our music!

Every Toyota has a story.

And with 90% of all Toyota Camrys sold in the last 15 years still on the road*, we want to hear yours. Share your story at facebook.com/toyota

HERE'S WHAT MAKES THREE SEQUELS TO OUR FAVORITE FRANCHISES SUPER SPECIAL.

FALLOUT: new vegas

PS3, Windows, Xbox 360

Special sauce: Original developers!

After taking over the defunct franchise in '08 with its own massively successful entry in the RPG series (Fallout 3), Bethesda smartly hired former staffers from Black Isle—the studio behind Fallout 1 and 2—to help on their sequel, New Vegas. Those developers bring old-school authenticity to an already awesome edition. As senior designer Chris Avellone, formerly of Black Isle, says, "There's even stuff from the pen-and-paper role-playing game." You just overdosed on dork juice, didn't you?

CALL OF DUTY: BLACK OPS

PS3, Xbox 360, Wii

Special sauce: Gambling!

How did the developers at Treyarch improve the most popular first-person shooter in the world's multiplayer mode? Betting! In four wager match types, players can choose to ante up penny stakes or tens of thousands of units of in-game currency, which is used to purchase upgrades. "Some people would call the sheer number of game modes alone ludicrous," says game design director David Vonderhaar. "And they'd probably be right." Why he had to get a rapper involved beats us, but the game's good!

MEDAL OF HONOR

PS3, Windows, Xbox 360

Special sauce: Realism!

MoH's designers worked so hard to create a realistic and respectable Special Forces experience in their first-person shooter, they enlisted real Tier 1 operators as consultants. Guys who, according to one, "Are dedicated to the art of war like an Olympian is dedicated to gold." As to how it gets real, the still-active soldier says, "The sequence where a ranger calls home, making everything sound boring while getting ready to go into the fight of his life...when my wife saw that, she said, 'Oh, my God, I've had that call.'"

AT LONG LAST

FOUR MORE FOLLOW-UPS WE'VE WAITED FOR WITH SWEATY-PALMED ANTICIPATION.

CASTLEVANIA: LORDS OF SHADOW

PS3, Xbox 360

The Dracula-baiting Belmont clan makes a comeback. Playing as Gabriel, gamers wield the classic whip in a mash-up of God of War-style action and timeless 'Vania platforming.

GRAN TURISMO 5

PS3

After five long years, Gran Turismo returns with 70 tracks in 20 countries and, for the first time, vehicle damage! Realistically crashing Lambs and the more than 100 other cars will never get old.

STAR WARS: THE FORCE UNLEASHED 2

PS3, Xbox 360

As Starkiller you use dual lightsabers and new Force powers, like Jedi mind trick, to fight stormtrooper hordes in a galaxy far, far away. This is the game you're looking for.

FABLE III

Xbox 360

The RPG is back with an improved co-op mode that allows players to adventure together in Victorian-age Albion, open business ventures, and even marry. Fight to see who wears the pantaloons in the family!

LUMBER JACKED

This chain saw is sharper than your average wood-eater. By the way, that tree just looked at you funny!

You may not share our dream of winning the Hot Saw competition at the Lumberjack World Championships and spending the next five years fighting off jean-shorts-wearing groupies (some of them female!). But that doesn't mean you don't deserve a top-notch chain saw like the Stihl MS 280. At less than 12 pounds, it's light enough to tote around the yard, yet its 2.7-kilowatt engine gives the chain plenty of bite. And thanks to a handy microprocessor, it constantly adjusts the fuel-air mixture for optimum efficiency in all conditions. That means you can pull the cord and clear-cut your neighbor's intruding branches with reckless abandon. Can't you smell the glory now? (Hint: It smells like gasoline.) $500, stihlusa.com WARNING: Professional model on a closed set. Do not attempt chain-saw use with open-toed footwear at home.

HEAVY METAL

When Motley Crüe drummer Tommy Lee isn't driving hard beats, he's got his hands on a chopper.

THAT'S A LONG-ASS MOTOR-CYCLE. IF PEOPLE DIDN'T KNOW BETTER, THEY MIGHT THINK YOU WERE COMPENSATING FOR SOMETHING. Ha-ha. Yeah, the bike is a little more than 12 feet long, and it's got the longest front end I've ever seen. It's out there. It's nearly impossible to make a U-turn.

WHAT'S THE STORY BEHIND IT?

I had it custom-made about four years ago. I wanted a sort of road-warrior bike. It's all matte black—no fancy graphics, just a dirty-ass, barhopping rat bike. It looks like death, but I love cruising on it. There's no radio. Just you and the road.

NO RADIO MUST BE TOUGH GIVEN ALL THE SUBMISSIONS YOU HAD TO LISTEN TO FOR YOUR NEW METHODS OF MAYHEM ALBUM. For months I'd get up at 9 A.M. and listen to demos until 2 or 3 A.M. We put the raw tracks up online and had fans remix different parts. We had about 10,000 submissions. I wanted to make a record with the whole world. It was a cool, cool experience.

HAVE YOU ALWAYS BEEN INTERESTED IN MOTORCYCLES?

Yes. I got my first Harley in '82 and stared at it all day. There's just something about bikes: You have your girl on the back, and she's digging the vibrations and holding on for dear life. There's nothing better.

Methods of Mayhem's A Public Disservice Announcement is available on iTunes.

College Football Rivalries—Settled!

THINK THE NCAA'S CLASSIC RIVALRIES ARE DEAD?

THINK AGAIN. WHEN THESE SCHOOLS GO TO WAR, THERE'S MUCH MORE AT PLAY THAN GRIDIRON SKILL. HERE WE DECLARE EACH BATTLE'S WINNER BASED ON HISTORY, HOT CHICKS, AND WHATEVER THE HELL ELSE WE WANT.

STANFORD AT CAL

November 20 // Series record: 55-46-11, Stanford

"The Big Game" kicked off in 1892, with future prez Herbert Hoover acting as Stanford's manager. His Cardinal beat Cal's Golden Bears 14-10.

SCHOOL MOTTO

Cal: "Let there be light." For their bongs, they mean, right?

Stanford: "The wind of freedom blows" ...for privileged white kids.

Edge: Cal

COMMUNITY WITH MORE TO LOSE

Cal: San Franciscans are so busy eating locally grown soybeans while driving Priuses to their next anti-cat-declawing rally, they probably won't even notice if Calluses.

Stanford: Let's see, Silicon Valley went bust in the late '90s, as did former student Tiger Woods a decade later. Football and good weather may be all they've got left.

FANTALENTS

Cal: Ingenuity. Berkeley students are credited with inventing the "card stunt," whereby fans coordinate to create words or images by holding up giant cards at games. You're welcome, Yalies (see right). Stanford: Intellectual snobbery. Quoth one recent alum (who refuses to be named because his boss graduated from Berkeley): "Generally speaking, they have the bigger grudge, because if any of them had gotten into Stanford, they wouldn't have gone to Cal." Holy No-Cal smackdown! Edge: Stanford

STADIUM SCARE FACTOR

Cal: Memorial Stadium rests directly on top of the Hayward Fault, which makes it an "appreciable life hazard," according to a recent seismic safety study. Stanford: The band's scathing halftime shows have crushed more visitors than the Cardinal's D, with formations like the Hearst Burger, named after Cal student Patty Hearst's kidnapping in 1974: It took the shape of two buns and no patty. Edge: Stanford

LAMEST FOR-CREDIT CLASS

Cal: Children's Literature. If you get high and read James and the Giant Peach backward, universal truths are revealed, brah. Stanford: Introduction to Guzheng. Students learn how to play the guzheng, a 21-string traditional Chinese instrument. Course "may be repeated for credit a total of 14 times." At which point you'd better be the fucking Jimi Hendrix of China. Edge: Cal

YALE AT HARVARD

November 20 // Series record: 65-53-8, Yale

Sure, "the Game" has no football relevance, but the fact that it brings together this many eggheads at one time each year has to count for something, right?

PRANK WARS

Yale: In 2004 students dressed as the Harvard pep squad passed out cards to Crimson fans that, raised, read: WE SUCK. Harvard: In 1933 members of Harvard's Lampoon humor mag kidnapped Yale's mascot bulldog. Edge: Yale

POWERFUL DROPOUTS

Yale: Dick Cheney. Will shoot up your face. Harvard: Mark Zuckerberg. Can erase you from the social universe. Edge: Harvard

LEGITIMATE CONNECTION TO THE GAME OF FOOTBALL

Yale: Late-19th century alum and coach Walter Camp is credited with introducing many features of the modern game, including the system of downs.

Harvard: Built the first-ever concrete stadium in 1903. Three years later a proposal to widen the field was shot down because the stadium could not be easily renovated...leading to the adoption of the forward pass. Edge: Harvard

When these local rivals meet, it's like a steaming pot of chili did a shot of tequila and then vomited itself all over a 10-gallon hat. Yee-haw!

STADIUM SCARE FACTOR

A&M: Fans at Kyle Field stand for the entire game—even when they're drunk! Texas: Darrell K. Royal is the largest stadium by seating capacity in the Lone Star State. Suck on that, Jerry Jones. Edge: A&M

CREEPIEST TRADITION

A&M: When mascot Reveille, a collie, dies, the school holds a military funeral and buries her in the field. Texas: Holds a séance-y "hex rally" before A&M game. Edge: Texas

A&M: "Aggie War Hymn." "Saw varsity's horns off/Saw varsity's horns off/Saw varsity's horns off." Like that "Redrum" kid, but with school spirit!

Texas: "The Eyes of Texas." "The eyes of Texas are upon you/You cannot get away." We're officially having nightmares. Edge: Texas

November 26 // Series record: 40-33-1, Alabama

This intrastate rivalry, which kicked off in 1893 and was later dubbed the Iron Bowl, is the most bitter in all of college football. Period.

BITCHIEST DISPUTE

Auburn: In 1906 the Tigers' coach threatened to cancel the series if 'Bama continued to use elaborate structures and shifts. Um... Alabama: A year later Auburn asked to up player per diems for both teams to $3.50. Alabama said no, causing a 41-year standoff. Edge: Auburn Got Balls? *

MEET THE LATEST IN RETRO-COOL MAN-FOOD: MEATBALLS.

What is the manliest meat?

A dino-size porterhouse? A barbecued pork shoulder? A five-alarm chicken wing? Before you say yes to any of those, consider the humble meatball, a spherical mash-up of savory wonder. You don't have to be an expert chef to make them: All you need are two hands and some ground-up animal. If you can make a snowball, you can make dinner.

Yes, friends, we are living in the age of the meatball. Increasingly, chefs around the country are celebrating this simple peasant food, dressing it up with fancy ingredients or stripping it down to its essence for a satisfying taste of home. Lamb, lobster, foie gras, even Kobe beef—if you can grind it up, there's a chef somewhere turning it into a meatball.

But no one has boiled this trend down better than the guys behind New York City's Meatball Shop: Daniel Holzman, chef, and Michael Chernow, general manager. Their bustling nine-month-old restaurant, a 39-seat spot nestled amid the bars and late-night lounges of the Lower East Side, serves one thing and one thing only: meatballs. (OK, there are some vegetable sides, but that's it.)

Ravenous diners can choose from four types of two-ounce balls: beef, pork, chicken, and, for heathens, veggie. Get them "naked" (four balls in a bowl with one of four sauces: classic tomato, spicy meat, Parmesan cream, or mushroom gravy) or in sandwich form with melted mozzarella or provolone. Everything on the menu is less than 10 bucks, including daily specials like the "jambalaya ball," crammed with shrimp, chicken, andouille, and pork. It's Mardi Gras in your mouth!

The appeal, according to Holzman, is simple. "People don't cook anymore," he says. ➤

EVER WANTED TO ENTER A MEATBALL TRIVIA CONTEST? NOW YOU CAN.

LEFTOVERS RULE

Like many of Mom's best meals, meatballs were born of stinginess. Peasants in early cultures would roll bits of meat with grains, nuts, and fruits to make it last longer.

FOR THE BIRDS

The earliest recorded recipes for meatballs date to ancient Rome. A common ingredient? Peacock.

MO' MONEY, MO' MEAT

At $30 the one-pound Kobe beef ball at Miami's Prime Italian is the most expensive ball short of a Lance Armstrong prosthetic.

OPEN WIDE

In 2005 competitive eater Sonya Thomas downed 163 ounces of meatballs in 12 minutes—a world record.

PASTA LA VISTA

The tradition of serving meatballs with spaghetti began not in Italy but in America, where we like being fat.

FEATBALL

The world's largest meatball was born '09 at Nonni's Italian Eatery in Concord, NH, weighing 222½ pounds and looking like a massive turd.

"But if you're going out to dinner, you have two choices: a special meal or McDonald's. Now, in its day McDonald's was cool. In 1963 a guy could take a girl there, roller-skate over, and she'd be stoked. But for our generation, there isn't that place. We wanted to open a place where you can take a date that won't be terribly expensive and still fits all the requirements of a good restaurant today."

The Meatball Shop was actually a bit of an accident. Holzman, 31, and Chernow, 30, grade-school buddies who started working together doing deliveries at a Manhattan vegan restaurant (irony alert!) 17 years ago, were finally following through on talk of a joint venture. They had scoped out a downtown location with two entrances, one next door to a bar. "There were always people outside, smoking cigarettes and hanging out," Chernow says, "and we thought, How are we gonna feed those drunk people?"

The duo decided to run a takeout window in that entrance and started casing the neighborhood to see what people were chowing down on late-night: pizza, fries, "basically garbage," according to Chernow. Then he recalled his time managing the bar at Frank, an Italian bistro in the city's East Village. "I didn't want to eat a big bowl of pasta late at night, so I would just order the meatballs with broccoli or spinach." The deal on the two-entrance spot fell through, but a seed had been planted. When a different lease opened up blocks away, Chernow says, "We looked at each other and said, 'Meatballs. Let's just fuckin' do it.'"

What they quickly discovered, selling nearly 2,000 balls a day right out of the gate, is that love of balls is pretty much universal. "Focused food is definitely where things are going right now," Chernow says. "The best burger, 'the best pizza.' But fundamentally, people just love meatballs. I think that's the beginning and end of it."

"People go crazy for them," Holzman adds. "There are all these fancy chefs putting out great meatballs. But at its base it's a comfort food. It's hard to screw up. On the scale of what bad is, you're not like, 'This is disgusting.' Maybe you're like, 'This isn't my favorite meatball.' But for the most part, meatballs taste good wherever you go."

There are, of course, personal preferences when it comes to balls. In the flavor department, an early experiment with a salmon ball was removed from the menu, but not without pleas from its few passionate supporters. And it's possible that not every customer will love the Shop's philosophy on texture. "If your grandmother cooked dense meatballs, you're probably prone to enjoying a dense meatball," Chernow says. "Here we embrace a more supple ball."

"I want to put up a sign," Holzman chimes in. "BE GENTLE: OUR BALLS ARE TENDER."

Perhaps good advice for the most surprising segment of the restaurant's clientele: women. "I never expected to see groups of six girls waiting an hour to chow down on melted-cheese-covered balls," Holzman says.

"And then following it up with a massive ice cream sandwich," Chernow adds. "My theory is, a woman hears about us and calls five of her friends like, 'We gotta go to this place!' A dude just thinks, 'Maybe I'll get drunk and go there one night. I very rarely see a crew of guys come in here at eight for dinner. They come between midnight and 4 A.M. and barely speak—just, 'Mumble, mumble, meatball, mumble.'"

The pair's next step in feeding the hungry masses? Another foray into seafood. After an animated debate on the merits of a particular recipe for monkfish balls, Holzman pauses and shrugs. "Life is all about the next meatball," he says.

Meatball Shop chef Daniel Holzman, left, and GM Michael Chernow love talking about their balls.

REAL GIRLS REVEAL WHAT THEY'RE

Sure, it was hot, but, still, it was no way to turn up to Mom's 60th birthday party.

In true Thanksgiving tradition, unbutton your pants. Because you won't be needing them after you read about all the dirty, flirty, nasty, and naughty things women are most thankful for this year.

While others have been planning a turkey supper, we've been planning a sexy feast, gathering dozens of real women at our table to tell us what they love most about getting down to business with you. Sure, it's not polite Thanksgiving dinner conversation, but it beats listening to Grandpa rant about the price of milk.

The best part is, we're going to tell you how to take everything these appreciative ladies say and put it to good use in bed. You can thank us later.

LAY DATES

On this time-honored American holiday, many women are raising a glass to the sexy traditions they've started in the sack. For example, each week 31-year-old Trish* and her fiancé celebrate "Screwsday," in which they try a new ➤ sex move every Tuesday. "We started doing it because we were in a rut and wanted to bone outside our comfort zone," she says. "We've discovered things we didn't think we'd like, such as adding restraints. Of course, there are also totally awkward things I learned that I don't enjoy—like seeing him in a priest frock for role play. But overall I really look forward to our weekly experiment."

Rachel, 26, and her boyfriend like to observe real holidays with kinky customs. On Bastille Day she dressed up like a French maid and made l'amour while spouting dirty French phrases. On Columbus Day they borrowed his father's sailboat and did it at sea. "When you turn holidays into sexy occasions, you want to celebrate all of them—even the silly ones," she says. "My friends never understand why I get so excited for Arbor Day."

Show your gratitude: Create a sexy ritual with your lady that forces you to switch up your sexual routine. (Yes, Threesome Thursdays would be great, but try to make it about just the two of you.) If you work near each other, how about a designated day for lunchtime quickies? Is she artsy-fartsy? Suggest a regular body-painting session. Whatever you do, don't do it too often or for too long—the last thing she wants is a sexual tradition that feels as surprising and arousing as laundry night.

ELECTRIC DREAMS

While there's no substitute for a man, several women expressed gratitude for the technological advancements that fill in when no guy is around. "I couldn't live without my vibrators," says 32-year-old Melissa, who bought her first vibe 10 years ago and has since amassed a collection of eight. "They all have varied speed settings, and one has a couple of fun add-ons for extra stimulation. I definitely like to use them with guys, too—the combined effect brings my orgasms to a whole new level."

Other gals pay homage to the technology not in their nightstand drawer but online. "Skype has saved my relationship by allowing me to have long-distance sex with my boyfriend, who's working in London for a year," says Annie, 27. "It's not only a million times cheaper than long-distance phone sex; it's hotter because there's a visual. The first time we did it, I was able to give him a real striptease instead of lying there in my pj's pretending to be naked."

Show your gratitude: Surprise her with a gizmo that will amplify your talents with a supersexy buzz. (Jimmyjane sells a range of models, from a simple $16 bullet to a $35 vibrating ring to the double-headed Form 2, $135, which won an award at this year's AVNs.) If you're feeling extra bold, ask her to use it while you watch on Skype. As you're probably aware, you don't need to be long-distance to watch a lady pleasure herself online.

THE BEST PARTS

Not surprisingly, many women boiled down their love of sex to a love of self—specifically, their lovely lady lumps. After all, what's not to like? "My boobs are super sensitive, so I love having them fondled and sucked," says 29-year-old Julia of her natural C cups. "When my boyfriend squeezes my nipples while he's going down on me, I'm in total ecstasy." Meanwhile, Megan, a 31-year-old Pilates devotee, loves the firm yet round behind her exercise routine has created. "I'm always dying for a guy to grab my ass during sex," she says. "Smack it, spank it—enjoy it. That's why I'm in the gym five days a week!"

When it comes to the male anatomy, women are ever grateful for your equipment ("I could play with my boyfriend's dick all day," says Tami, 20). But there are even more utilitarian muscles that turn us on, too. "I love my guy's arms," says 25-year-old Krista. "Not because I'm into beefy dudes but because he's so strong. My favorite thing is when he picks me up while we're doing it and then stands up." And for Ellie, 23, there's nothing better than when her boyfriend gives her the finger. "His digits can bend to touch super-sensitive areas like my G-spot," she says. "It makes me feel like he's really exploring my body."

Show your gratitude: It's all about the F-word—that is, foreplay. Devote one night a week to a different part of your girlfriend's body and ask her to do the same for you. (There must be something other than your member that craves her attention.) Linger there for 20 to 30 minutes, taking periodic detours to other sensitive bits so that no area goes untouched. When you both can't take it anymore, move on to the other F-word.

FULLY POSEABLE

Many women we spoke with were thankful not just for our bodies but for everything they can do—like the reverse pile driver! But even the most devoted yogis in the group confessed that sometimes classic sex positions are the most erotic. "Missionary is the best," says Janelle, 22. "It lets my clit and my vagina get the most simultaneous action—which is pretty much the only way I can orgasm during sex. Plus, it kind of takes me back to losing my virginity."

Still others traveled back even farther in time when asked about their favorite sexual escapades. "My boyfriend and I have make-out-only nights where we just roll around and rub against each other, never taking off our undies," says Mary, 33. "I don't know what position you'd call it—dry humping?—but it's totally reminiscent of junior high and gets us supercharged for the next time, when we actually go 'all the way.'

But by far the sex act that received the most praise was oral. "I'm hugely thankful for any man who loves going down," says 25-year-old Collette. "Nothing makes me feel sexier or come faster. I also love 69-ing—it turns me into a porn star."

Show your gratitude: Pick up a translated Kama Sutra (see: The Pocket Idiot's Guide to the Kama Sutra)—the ancient Sanskrit screed that everyone thinks is about crazy pretzel-twisty versions of exotic and alien sex acts. While the guide does contain some wacky suggestions, it mostly focuses on maximizing the mind-blowing potential of positions you already know (missionary, woman on top).

Bypass the spiritual hooey and take away the key info: where to put your bodies so you both get the most explosive O's. Then settle in for a long holiday nap; this stuff is even better than tryptophan.

WITH A NEW ALBUM AND A NEW FOUR-LETTER TATTOO,
THE SCORCHING AVRIL LAVIGNE
CONTINUES TO ROCK OUR WORLD.
BY RUTH HILTON
PHOTOGRAPHS BY DON FLOOD

HEY

SAY THE THIRD TIME'S THE CHARM, AND HERE'S THE PROOF:

AVRIL LAVIGNE'S THIRD MAXIM COVER IS OFFICIALLY HER HOTTEST SHOOT YET. THE 26-YEAR-OLD SONGBIRD IS ALL GROWN UP AND FULLY IN TOUCH WITH HER SEXY SIDE AS HER NEW SINGLE HITS THE AIRWAVES. THOUGH THE PAST YEAR HAS BROUGHT MANY CHANGES IN HER LIFE, INCLUDING A DIVORCE, AVRIL IS MORE CONFIDENT THAN EVER. THE ONLY TRACE OF HER ONCE-TRADEMARK EXPLETIVE-LADEN TIRADES IS THE NEW "FUCK" TATTOO ON HER RIB CAGE. ARE YOU TOUGH ENOUGH TO HANG WITH POP PUNK'S REIGNING PRINCESS?

This is your third Maxim shoot...and we have to say, they just keep getting sexier!
I'm older and more comfortable with my femininity. The first time I was about 19 and was very nervous. I was more of a tomboy, I guess. I've always had a great time shooting with Maxim. I feel like it gives me my freedom. It's an edgy magazine, so it's cool.

What makes a woman sexy?
Attitude and confidence.

So, a new single and a new album to follow...
I have officially just wrapped the album. I've been working on it for about two and a half years. I've lived a lot, gone through a lot, and put a lot into my songwriting. These songs are very meaningful to me.

A lot of your songs have been about boys. Is that still the case on this album?
This album is the first that is not boy-bashing. [laughs] Is it inspired by my personal relationships? Yes. Inspired by life experiences? Yes. Inspired by experiences in situations with my family and friends? Yes.

What do you think of the new stars who have emerged since your last record, like Katy

Perry, Lady Gaga, and Ke$ha?

It's an interesting period in music right now, very '80s and beat-driven. A lot of girls are really into their image and costumes and going over the top. I really like Ke$ha. Her songs are fun to party to, and her lyrics are hilarious.

There have been some notable meltdowns of former teen stars. How have you managed to avoid those?

I got here on my own. I came from a small town and grew up in a regular home. I know what I've worked hard for. I've seen a lot of people who have gone a little crazy and who are really into the Hollywood scene. I don't really like to hang out with people like that.

Are you able to play in private?

Well, there are a lot of paparazzi in L.A. The only time I really ever get photographed is if I decide to go out with my friends to a bar or club, so then it kind of looks like I do that more than I do. The majority of the time I stay in.

Do you laugh or get irritated when you see stories about yourself in the tabloids?

You can only laugh at it and roll your eyes because it's like,

"Really?" They usually just pull that stuff out of their ass, but I think people know that.

Do you even care what people think of you anymore?

I care, but you can't please everyone. I'm here to create my music and give it to the world.

Is there anything you think people would be surprised to know about you?

Yeah—I'm really shy and quiet.

You have some new tattoos since our last shoot. Tell us about them.

[points to forearm] This is ABBEY DAWN—that's my nickname and clothing line. I have a lightning bolt, a music note, and a star. [pulls top up to show hip] Oh, I had a little star here last time, but now I have a big star. I have about 15 altogether, but they're all small.

You also have a fuck tattoo on one side of your rib cage.

I got that one two months ago...no, six.

What dating advice would you give Maxim readers?

I like a classy man, a gentleman who opens the door and gives flowers and always puts the lady first. I'm a little old-fashioned like that.

A full-page photograph of Avril Lavigne. She is wearing a black, backless, zip-up top with a large feathered shoulder pad on her right shoulder. She is also wearing black velvet pants with a zipper detail down the side. Her hair is blonde and messy. She is wearing black boots covered in small metallic studs. She is posing with her arms crossed and one leg bent. A tattoo is visible on her left forearm.

Arnett

First off—

Hey, listen. How is working at Maxim? Is it just, like, a bikini contest all day?

Oh, yeah, bikini contests and dwarves with trays of drugs.

So everybody is drunk and high all the time? Good for you guys!

Congrats on the birth of your second son. Do you like being a dad?

Yes. I mean, I haven't actually met the children yet. I'm not really a baby guy. I said, "Bring them around when they're five or six."

What's your favorite dad activity?

All bits aside, I enjoy it all. It sounds so fucking boring, but I can be changing the worst diaper and be thinking, This is great. And if I had, like, 20-year-old me around, he'd be like, "Dude, this is not great. You're wiping somebody else's crap off their ass."

Why is Running Wilde the new show everyone should watch?

There are a lot of TV shows and movies these days, I've found, that explore the mundane. And guess what? Turns out the mundane is boring! Who woulda thunk? Running Wilde gets back to that thing that really captured people's imaginations, that Dynasty/Dallas shallow-but-fun world.

You've got a great cast.

Well, Keri Russell is a handful. No, we're lucky. The day we fooled her into doing our show was a great day for us. David Cross is on the show as well, and I'm also on his IFC show, The Increasingly Poor Decisions of Todd Margaret. We made a pact that we would never stop working together.

Aw, that's nice.

Yeah. Well, it's not true.

What's the biggest difference between your Running Wilde character, Steve Wilde, and the great Gob Bluth from Arrested Development?

Steve is a rich playboy who is seemingly all about himself, but on a personal level he's a really generous guy. Gob, on the other hand, was an incredibly selfish person. He had this sense of being wronged on a very fundamental level at an early age, and he was always looking to give a "fuck you" back to the world.

Where would you place Arrested Development in the pantheon of shows that were canceled too soon? Somewhere between Star Trek and Freaks and Geeks?

I wouldn't dare to attest that we were canceled too soon. We got what the world dealt us. And who knows? If we got another season, maybe our legacy would have been different.

You must have strange run-ins with Arrested Development fans.

What's weird is when people pop into your personal space. Of course, that comes with the territory. I'm happy that anybody liked the show, but...I remember this one time I was in a restaurant, and this guy jumped in front of me and did a coin trick, really abruptly. I was like, Am I being mugged?

OK, time to ask: Will there be an Arrested Development movie?

The Arrested movie is gonna happen. Mitch Hurwitz said he was halfway done with the script. He's juggling a lot of things right now, like making Running Wilde, but once he finishes it we're off to the races.

What drives you to play pricks?

There's nothing less interesting than a nice guy. Sure, he might be great to marry and have kids with, but in terms of entertainment value, who gives a shit? I enjoy playing characters who are damaged and kind of, well, assholes.

Is it fun being a celebrity couple with Amy Poehler?

Yeah, it's the best. I love being able to wake up in the morning and look across the pillow and be looking at a celebrity.

Would Amy say likewise?

She would say that when she looks over the pillow, she does not see a celebrity.

Are you guys the funniest couple—

Of all time? Yes.

You even beat out Danny DeVito and Rhea Perlman?

Are you kidding? Of course! No, I guarantee you Danny and Rhea are far funnier than we are.

You and Amy collaborate quite often. You must enjoy it.

Well, we've collaborated on two kids so far, and it's been great. Our two joints have been very productive.

"I HAVEN'T ACTUALLY MET MY CHILDREN YET. NOT REALLY A BABY GUY."

Are you raising your boys to be comedy supermen?

Oh, yeah. My two-year-old, Archie, is really into Bill Hicks. [laughs] I'm actually sick of celebrities who say, "I'm really just a comedy nerd." Give me a fucking break. You're not making yourself sound more "of the people."

When you're filming Parks and Recreation, are you deferential to your wife since she's the star?

No, no. When I'm on Parks and Rec, I'm the one who's got it going on. I'm the swinging dick on that set.

What's the most important thing you've learned about women?

Oh, I've got to be careful here. Women have a tough time...No, you know what? Let me put it this way: Women are fantastic. Fantastically illogical creatures.

You used to do lots of serious roles. Would you ever do another?

Well, we all remember Jonah Hex, right? Don't we? We don't? Yeah, I would do another. Honestly, I don't have a plan. Some other man would have a plan, but I'm just winging it.

Is there a dramatic movie you've done that you are proud of and think people should Netflix?

No.

Finally, what do you wish you could tell your 18-year-old self?

Quit drinking five years earlier. And hit the gym, for God's sake!

SEASON OF FIRE

After a seismic shift rocked the roundball world this summer, a South Beach superteam has a target on its back. Get ready for bigger games, badder blood, and the most gripping season in basketball history!

BARKLEY ON THE BIG GAMES*

> “The regular season?” says Charles Barkley. “Most of it’s monotonous. There are really only six teams that have a shot at winning the NBA championship: Boston, Miami, and Orlando in the East, and the Lakers, Utah, and Oklahoma City in the West. There’s nobody else with a chance of surpassing them in either conference. The marquee games between those teams (five of them are listed below) are the ones to watch, where everybody’s trying to send a message in advance of the playoffs. And all those other teams? Well, they’re just playing for fun.”

HEAT AT CELTICS
October 26, 7:30 p.m., TNT
This is the first time you'll see the big three: LeBron, Dwyane Wade, and Chris Bosh. Anyone who thinks the Celtics are going to hand over their crown to Miami doesn't know much about basketball. We're going to start to see how things play out here.

HEAT AT LAKERS
December 25, 5 p.m., ABC
Kobe's the man, and, man, it ain't easy. If winning championships were easy, everybody would do it. The Lakers are the best team in the NBA, but Miami's gonna want to send them a message that they're the new kids on the block.

NUGGETS AT THUNDER
December 25, 8 p.m., ESPN
Everyone thinks this game is about Carmelo Anthony versus Kevin Durant, but really it's for the entire country to see Oklahoma City. They're the next big thing. They're all, like, 21 and will be tough to beat for the next 10 years. Get to know them now.

MAGIC AT CELTICS
January 17, 8 p.m., TNT
This one's all about getting the upper hand on your competition in preparation for the playoffs. Both teams should have stellar records, but each team will be trying to figure out how good they are and if they need to make a trade to win the East.

THUNDER AT LAKERS
January 17, 10:30 p.m., TNT
A great playoff matchup from last year. Go back and look at the series—the Thunder were the Lakers' toughest matchup before the Celtics. The Lakers won 4–2, but each game they won went down to the last couple minutes. Should be a real battle.

(and one to avoid)
HEAT AT CAVS
December 2, 8 p.m.
People will be intrigued by LeBron's return to Cleveland, but I'm not looking forward to it. It's going to be bitter and emotional, and could be dangerous for the players. I don't do that trash. I respect the game too much.

DWIGHT HOWARD

CENTER
ORLANDO MAGIC

THE LEAGUE'S BEST BIG MAN HAS A SCORE TO SETTLE WITH MIAMI. AND HIS COACH'S MUSTACHE.

Miami's been stealing all the hype, but Orlando may well be the team to beat in the East.

Feeling overlooked?

Well, people have been sleeping on Orlando forever. That's nothing new to us.

How are you feeling going into the season?

It's gonna be a different NBA—should be a lot of fun. The Bulls have gotten better, and, of course, the Heat have, too. I think it's a great new beginning for us all. I spent time in China and India this summer and saw some life-changing stuff. Mentally, I feel a lot stronger.

You're a big bowler. Who's better, you or Chris Paul?

I used to bowl every other day, and my highest score is a 274. The one time I played Chris, though, I had to use his ball, so he won. I want a rematch!

Your coach, Stan Van Gundy, has a killer 'stache. Have your teammates ever considered growing similar ones for a playoff run?

No way. We have considered trying to get Stan to cut his facial hair off, but he just wants to look like Paul Bearer from the WWE.

It's been reported that the Magic have a "no farting" rule during practice because of you. Have you ever crop-dusted the floor during a game?

Well, you know, I may have farted a couple of times while going up to dunk a ball.

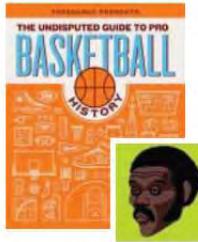

Is that how you get your edge?

Yes, but it only works for 20 seconds.

THE NBA'S WILDEST FANS

Any jacko can scalp a seat in South Beach, but to sit in Milwaukee's 100-fan-strong Squad 6, a noisy super-section of rowdy hoopers, you'll need to be hand-picked by Bucks center Andrew Bogut. Season 2 of Squad 6 will continue with more Miller Lite-fueled chants and nasty noisemakers. Sadly, the NBA has just outlawed vuvuzelas, a Squad 6 fave. "I take that personally," says Bogut, "but we'll stay one step ahead of the law, maybe with some trumpets, tambourines, and triangles."

● THEY CALL HIM CRAZY BECAUSE, WELL...HE IS. NOT THAT IT'S A BAD THING.

In June you hit the shot that clinched a title, then thanked your shrink on national TV. What could be better? Winning it again. I'm looking forward to the challenge of three-peating! It's a hard thing to do.

VH1's been following you for a series. What are we going to see? It's about family. Everything starts in the family, and it goes to other things—seeing how I interact with the fans and how I record music. Player, businessman, and family man. Figuring out how you balance it.

If you came in and edited Maxim, who would you put on the cover?

I would have to put Shin Shin [a Chinese pop singer] on the cover. And I would want to do a story on Celine Dion, 'cause I love Celine Dion's voice.

Have you ever met her?

I would love to meet Celine. I need to meet Celine Dion. I've been trying to meet her for three years. Every time I try to meet her, they always send me a phone number that somebody on Mars answers. I'm tired of speaking to people on Mars.

So what's shaved in your head right now?

Oh, nothing's shaved in my head right now. I'd get the Maxim logo shaved in my head.

OK. When can we do that? Opening night?

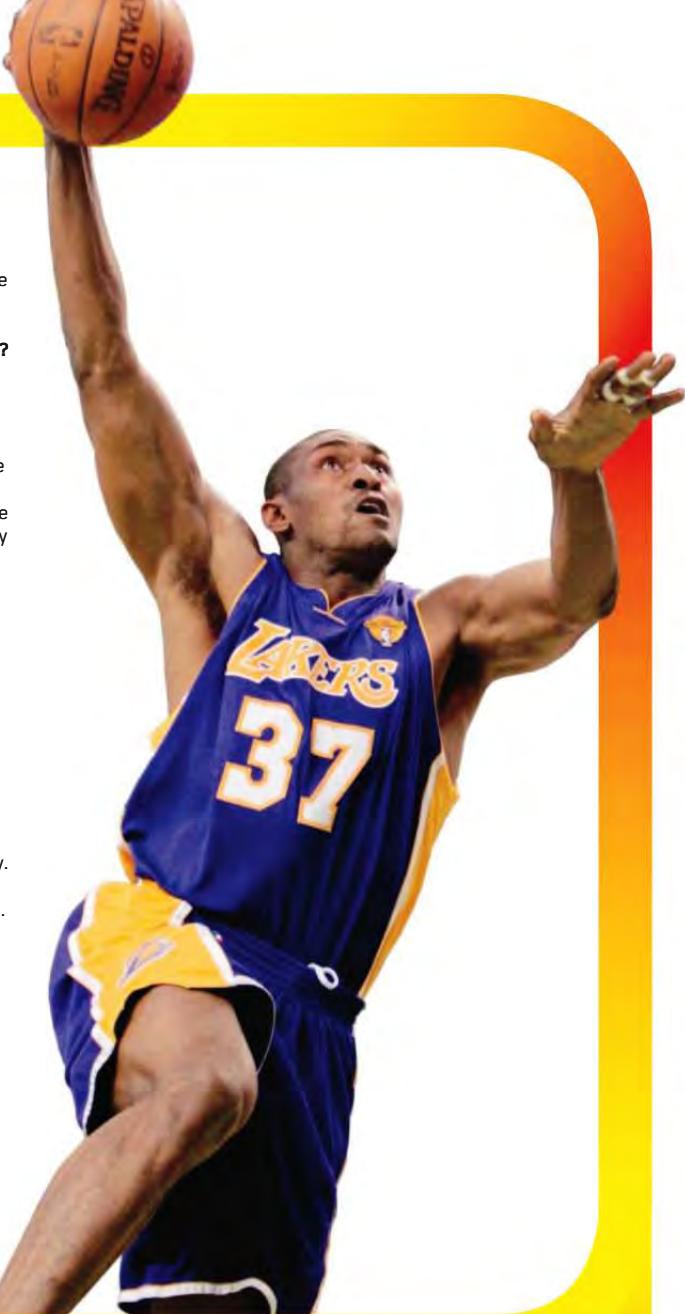

Whenever you're ready. You just gotta fly my barber in from Orlando.

Done. We're big fans of your Twitter feed, where you drop random updates like, "I'm taking a naked pringle to the beach." Just wondering what that one means.

I don't know. It's just a potato chip. It's funny.

It is.

I just like to have fun.

ABC's 20/20 "SPEED DATE" TEST SHOWS ATHENA PHEROMONES CAN INCREASE SEX APPEAL.

MESSAGE FROM DR. CUTLER

Dr. Cutler has a Ph.D. in biology from University of Penn, post-doc at Stanford. Co-discovered human pheromones in 1986 (Time 12/1/86; and Newsweek 1/12/87).

When ABC 20/20's television crew came out to Athena Institute to interview me, I had no idea of what "test" they might perform on my two pheromone cosmetics. And I did not suggest one. When I saw their 12/9/05 telecast, I found out. ABC 20/20 cleverly picked a "speed dating" contest with identical sets of twins.

One twin had been wearing Athena Pheromone 10X for men and one Athena Pheromone 10:13 for women. I knew that in two published scientific studies, my fragrance additives worked for 74% to increase sexual attractiveness. So you can imagine my pleasant surprise, that our Athena pheromones were successful in this non-scientific speed dating trial in 19 out of 20 trial "dates".

KEVIN DURANT

FORWARD-GUARD
OKLAHOMA CITY THUNDER

● THE FUTURE OF THE NBA (AND THE STEERING WHEEL OF ONE BADASS VAN) ARE IN HIS HANDS.

You've had a wild summer leading the U.S. national team, and playing all over the world. What's been the highlight so far?

Going to China and climbing the Great Wall! I got a workout I'll never forget.

You led the league in scoring last year and just signed a huge contract. You're a big deal. Why are you still driving a conversion van to work?

That's my everyday car. It's cool, know what I mean? I drive a lot. All last summer I drove from Oklahoma to Texas to go to school. I took the van. It's got a bed in the back, a TV, and everything. I like to sleep back there! What more do you need?

During All-Star weekend you won the H.O.R.S.E. competition and were awarded what was universally panned as the ugliest trophy of all time. How would you redesign it? I'd make it a big glass centaur. Half horse, half my torso.

You're always standing up for the skinny guys. Who's in your skinny guy hall of fame?

Well, Snoop Dogg is undoubtedly number one. And Travis Barker is definitely in there; he's a great drummer.

Snoop, Travis Barker, and uh...hmm. I'm gonna have to get back to you on that.

What's your pregame ritual?

Before every game I gotta dunk, reverse, and dunk left handed. I tie my shoes on the table every game. And I gotta dance. And I gotta pray.

What's the dance?

It's called the Dougie.

Besides playing basketball, what's the best thing you can do with a 7'4" wingspan?

When I'm at the mall and they have four rows of shirts stacked, I can reach the top row, no problem. Even if I don't need the shirt, girls notice me. Gotta put on a little show for them, you know?

THE ONLY reason not TO WATCH MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL? The ravishing Taylor Cole of NBC's newest mindbender, THE EVENT.

Taylor Cole of NBC's newest mindbender, THE EVENT.
BY Brekke FLETCHER PHOTOGRAPHS BY KAYT Jones

"Wanna skinny dip?"
she asked. We got excited until she passed the low-fat mayo.

Mourning the loss of Lost?

The end of 24? The blindingly gorgeous Taylor Cole will get you over it, and fast. This Texas rose is now the breakout babe from The Event, a conspiracy-filled mindbender eating up DVR space all across this great land of ours. In the show she plays Vicky Roberts, who flips from a bikini-clad damsel in distress to a double-agent femme fatale. But don't be fooled. There's more to this gorgeous girl than meets the eye.

How did you get your start in acting?

I played volleyball in high school until I tore my ACL senior year. Then I started modeling, did rehab on my knee, auditioned for Summerland, and moved to L.A. I've been here six years now.

Do you miss Texas?

I really love Texas. I don't get back there much, but the people are great. There's no b.s., no hidden agendas.

Your costars on Summerland were Ryan Kwanten of True Blood, Zac Efron, and Kellan Lutz. That show sure launched lots of careers.

Yeah, a lot of big names came out of Summerland. And Ryan and I dated for three and a half years. He's the sweetest.

Is it tough seeing your ex get randy on TV?

We were still dating when he got the show. If you can't draw the line between the character and the person, then you probably shouldn't date an actor.

Tell us about your Event character, Vicky.
Nice girls aren't always what they seem. She has a totally different side to her that will be revealed. She could be perceived as bad, but to her, she's just doing her job and doing what needs to be done. I don't think anybody bad thinks they're bad. She's very complex and has a lot of tricks up her sleeve. It's fun to play a character with so many different sides.

What "event" in your life would you not want them to make a show out of?

If I did have one, I wouldn't tell. But we can all learn from our mistakes. I usually do.

There is a lot of action on The Event. Any crazy moments from the set?

The back tire on my Jeep went missing recently, and I was convinced somebody was playing a joke on me. But I realized we were shooting in a sketchy neighborhood, so it was probably stolen. I wouldn't put it past anybody to play a practical joke.

Did we see you in the Green Hornet trailer?

It's a quick part, but it was really fun working with Seth Rogen, and the director let us do whatever we wanted with the scene. I can't wait to see how it turns out.

What is your guiltiest pleasure?

I'm a big eater, so I appreciate a good meal. Sushi is my favorite.

What do you look for in a guy?

Confidence, but not false confidence, because that's not attractive. Someone who's motivated and makes me laugh. If they just happen to be good-looking, I won't complain.

What turns you off?

Jealousy for no reason is my biggest turnoff. If I'm with a guy in a relationship, I want him to feel like he's king of the world. I don't want to play games. I want him to know how special he is.

What part of your body are you most proud of?

My legs take up about 70 percent of my body, and they look great in stilettos.

Are you a big partyer?

I did the nightlife thing for six years. Lately staying in with friends is more what I like to do.

Finally, are you single?

I'm excited to be single now, but I tend to jump from relationship to relationship. I fall in love easily. My goal is to be single for at least a year. We'll see how that goes. ●

JACKASS' JACKASSIEST MOMENTS 1) In the stunt that started it all, Johnny Knoxville tests self-defense equipment: "Tase me, bro!" 2) Steve-O gets hooked on his role as shark bait. 3) Dave England enjoys a shit sandwich (Kidding! That's just plain old shit.) 4) Bam Margera throws a haymaker at his long-suffering (and superhumanly tolerant) dad, Phil.

JOHNNY KNOXVILLE (cocreator, cast member, writer): Hello, my name is Johnny Knoxville, and this is the oral history of Jackass. As opposed to an anal history—which would be much longer.

Aspiring actor and writer PJ Clapp moved to Los Angeles from Tennessee after graduating high school in the late '80s. After a decade of struggle, Clapp, nicknamed Johnny Knoxville, was married and the father of a young daughter.

JOHNNY KNOXVILLE: I was making my living doing commercials for things like ESPN, Mountain Dew, and Bud Light. I was a complete whore because I had a young baby and I needed to make money. I had an idea for an article where I would test different types of self-defense equipment on myself. A few magazines wanted the story, but nobody wanted the liability. Everyone was fine with the pepper spray and the stun gun and the Taser gun. Where it got shady was where I was testing a bulletproof vest—with a .38. The only magazine that would do it was Big Brother.

TONY HAWK (über-skater, guest star): Big Brother was the rawest and funniest magazine out there, beyond just skateboarding. The articles were dense with sarcasm, shock, and vulgarities. Skaters ate it up.

JEFF TREMAINE (cocreator, director, Jackass; editor, *Big Brother): One of our first articles was a guide called "How to Kill Yourself." We had a tiny little staff. Slowly we were collecting people who "got it." They might not have had the most talent, but they definitely had the larger personalities. Chris Pontius came through that. And I hired "Wee Man" because he worked at the local skate shop and would just come by all the time. He was very unmotivated and a terrible employee.

CHRIS PONTIUS (cast member, writer): In the eighth or ninth issue, I was interviewed in Big Brother, and it was pretty wild. I was nude, and I think I wasn't even 18, so that was naughty. It was obvious I should write for the magazine. It took in the misfits of the skateboard world.

STEVE-O (cast member, writer): I made it my mission to track those guys down. My attitude was: Nobody needed to like me. They just needed to put me in the magazine.

SPIKE JONZE (cocreator, producer, writer, guest star): In the late '80s and early '90s, no one cared about skateboarders. There was no Internet, no other way to communicate, so everyone just made their own videos, and that's how skateboarding communicated with itself.

JEFF TREMAINE: Our first video was called Shit. Wee Man was on the cover, painted blue, with orange-dyed hair. Shit was pretty well received, so we decided to make the second video, called Number Two, and that's when we met Knoxville. He was not a skateboarder, so he had to be even more outrageous to survive.

JOHNNY KNOXVILLE: Jeff persuaded me to film the self-defense piece. I wasn't an aspiring video guy. The article was my evil attempt at imitating my hero, Hunter S. Thompson.

JEFF TREMAINE: The guys we had been working with, none of them could really talk to the camera. But Knoxville came back with this footage, and he's just walking you through, step by step, and you can't stop watching. Starting with the pepper spray, to the stun gun, and then the Taser gun, and then the bulletproof vest. It was like a snuff video. The cameraman didn't even want to be there.

GIDEON YAGO (former MTV News correspondent): I remember seeing that video for the first time in 1999 wasted at a friend's party, which is the way all skate videos are meant to be screened. I think Brian Graden found it the same way.

BRIAN GRADEN (former president of entertainment, MTV Networks): Johnny was so obviously a TV star, even in that small clip. I thought, Who is this guy?

JOHNNY KNOXVILLE: We had all these ideas of what a TV show might be. I would be kind of the host, like The Daily Show, and we would have all the guys come on and do stunts. Spike finally said, "You guys already have the show. The Big Brother videos—that's the show."

SPIKE JONZE: At the start, when we didn't know what it was, it could be anything. We thought, "We'll have 22 minutes on TV every week to do whatever we want. We can do anything. Let's not underestimate what 'anything' is."

Meanwhile, in West Chester, Pennsylvania, pro skateboarder Bam Margera was filming his family and friends. The videos were distributed under the CKY (Camp Kill Yourself) moniker and, like the Big Brother videos, became cult sensations.

BAM MARGERA (cast member, writer): We'd go to some park or building to skate ledges or Ollie off the stairs. I wasn't too liked by the police, but I didn't really have anything to lose. My aunt gave me an '89 Buick Regal, so whenever anybody said, "Dude, you're gonna get sued one day doing this," I'd say, "Yeah, what are they gonna sue me for? My Buick Regal that my aunt gave me? I don't care."

RYAN DUNN (cast member, writer): The guys out in L.A. took notice of us. They were wondering who these little jerks were in West Chester doing this ridiculous stuff.

BAM MARGERA: I remember when Jeff first called me. He flew me out to L.A., and I played CKY2K for him and Johnny. They just loved it. They were like, "You'd be perfect for Jackass."

Tremaine, Jonze, and Knoxville shopped the Jackass demo footage to various networks. Saturday Night Live offered

Knoxville a recurring segment, but the crew decided to go with MTV, which promised to give them more creative control.

VAN TOFFLER (president of MTV Networks): We just knew there were a bunch of knuckleheads out there who had a very high tolerance for stupidity and pain.

BRIAN GRADEN: We got pitched a stunt show every other week, but when I saw their video, it was clear they were taking such a joy from it. It wasn't a TV exercise; it was what these guys were doing anyway for their own amusement. You couldn't fake that, and if we could just preserve it, we had a show.

JASON "WEE MAN" ACUÑA (cast member, writer): Personally, I didn't think it would transfer into mainstream society. I thought this stuff was only funny in the skateboard community.

DAVE ENGLAND (cast member, writer): I was a total naysayer. I said, "I'll go ahead and work on it with you guys and get it together," but I thought MTV would put it on, like, Monday night at 3 A.M. once, and that would be that. "No one's gonna wanna see this crap."

STEVE-O: Jeff told me to put together all the video footage I had and send it in. A little while later, he told me not a single clip cleared MTV. We weren't allowed to play with fire, and I was always on fire. We weren't allowed to jump off stuff higher than a certain height, and I was always on fire and jumping off stuff from too high. So my first thought was, What kind of pussy-ass show is this?

SPIKE JONZE: We weren't doing anything with permits. We were doing it the way we had done our skate videos, just, you know, a camera, an idea, and a group of friends.

JOHNNY KNOXVILLE: In one of the earliest pranks, I was dressed in an orange jumpsuit with L.A. COUNTY JAIL written on it. I had a pair of cuffs on, and I went into a hardware store. My face was all dirty, and I was out of breath, and I ran back to the saws and the axes and asked anyone if they would help me.

JEFF TREMAINE: He freaked out the employees, and they called the police. Spike and I go out and film Knoxville walking out, and as soon as he does, all these cops roll up and park right in the middle of the street, draw their guns, and yell at him to get on the ground.

JOHNNY KNOXVILLE: I didn't explain immediately, because I thought, Well, this is footage. In the early days of Jackass, we would just go in anywhere and do pranks like that. Eventually we became smarter and would get a location agreement from a willing store owner first. We'd tip him off and say, "We are coming in to do this prank, but you cannot tell your employees."

Jackass premiered on MTV in April 2000 and was a runaway hit. The stars went from unknown to extremely famous overnight. A few even became fantasy boyfriend material.

SHANNA ZABLOW (producer): Girls think they're cute. For me it's like thinking your own brother's cute. I think they're adorable, but I don't find them attractive. There's a sense of family between the guys. They all really love each other, and I think girls like that.

JOHN WATERS (movie director, guest star, national treasure): I'm a big fan of Johnny's, and I think if I ever were to have a "type," it would be the Jackass boys.

GIDEON YAGO: The second it got to a mass audience, it blew the fuck up. And I think, to MTV's credit, the top execs knew enough to just get out of the way and let those guys do their thing.

SPIKE JONZE: Within a couple of months, Knoxville was on the cover of Rolling Stone.

JOHNNY KNOXVILLE: It was jarring, but it was a lot of fun. And I probably had a little too much fun. I definitely didn't handle it as well as I could have.

JEFF TREMAINE: Were some people handling success better than others? Yeah, definitely. Steve-O was all about fame. He wanted it so bad, whereas Pontius could give two shits. He didn't change at all. And Bam was already kind of a little celebrity in his world.

BRIAN GRADEN: Some of them were having a different ride with the fame. Some actors might dream their whole life of being famous, and I think Johnny had ambitions of that nature, but I'm not sure all the other cast members went out and thought, I'll do this stuff in my real life: I'll fall off bridges and end up being famous.

BAM MARGERA: Like a light switch, overnight I was the most popular kid in school. It was so fake to me that I couldn't take it anymore, so I left. Everybody who wouldn't even give me the time of day—now they want to be my best friend?

Despite a warning that ran before every show, on January 26, 2001, Connecticut teen Eric Lind accidentally set himself on fire while trying to emulate Jackass behavior. Senator Joe Lieberman of Connecticut issued a statement denouncing MTV. Jackass, the improbable pop phenomenon, became a political football.

JEFF TREMAINE: We would always watch something to see if it was too imitable. We still do that to this day.

TONY HAWK: I think it pushed the limits of what's appropriate for TV audiences. And because it was daring and edgy, it became conservative America's call to arms.

STEVE-O
"Clown Ingestor-Regurgitator"
36, Miami, FL

BAM MARGERA
"Dad Torturer"
31, West Chester, PA
"Ever since I was three, me and my dad [Phil] were always wrestling, but over the years I became faster and stronger and he became fatter and slower."

MORE OF JACKASS' JACKASSIEST MOMENTS 1) Wee Man, John Waters, and some fat chick get ready for the world's sexiest three-way. 2) Preston Lacy's Eggcellent Adventure ended in heartbreak. And projectile vomiting. 3) Less-Than-Wee Man chases Wee Man through the streets of L.A. 4) Kicking oneself in the head: Do not try this at home.

JOHNNY KNOXVILLE: We were supposedly the cause of the crumbling of society. That always made us laugh, but when Lieberman got on his high horse, I think in an election year, I took that seriously. And MTV got very, very scared.

VAN TOFFLER: We took tons of precautions on set. We had safety people there all the time. We never wanted anyone to get hurt. It's really sad and unfortunate when stuff like that happens. I'll leave it at that.

PRESTON LACY (cast member, writer): It was a strange time. My picture was on 20/20. Me in my underwear. All my family saw it, so I wasn't a big fan of that.

The first idea to be affected by the Lieberman-led backlash was the "Vomlet" sketch, in which Dave England consumes the ingredients for an omelet, then vomits them up into a hot skillet.

DAVE ENGLAND: We turned it in to MTV, and they decided the puke fumes were airborne pathogens. I was pretty bummed, because we nailed it the first time. The first time I fed a bite to Steve-O, and he puked all over my leg. MTV's insistence was to have everyone except me wear a Hazmat suit.

JOHNNY KNOXVILLE: Now you have to heat the omelet to this degree, and you have to be in Hazmat suits. At first we were like, "What? Fuck that. We're not gonna get in Hazmat suits." It just sucked the funny right out of it.

SPIKE JONZE: MTV got scared, so they pulled back on promoting the show, and it sort of took the steam out of it for us. It wasn't worth it.

VAN TOFFLER: We were symbolic of authority. They didn't like us drawing lines, which ultimately led to the demise of the show and their going as far as they could.

JOHNNY KNOXVILLE: I felt that we couldn't do a watered-down version of the show, so I quit. In hindsight I don't know how smart a move that was, because who did I think I was? I hadn't had any action for 10 years in Hollywood, and suddenly we have a hit show and I quit?

BRIAN GRADEN: I can't speak to what their emotional ride was. I can only say from the MTV side, it was a gold asset. We didn't need to promote the thing, because no matter where you put it, it got a giant rating. But they didn't want to do it anymore. We pulled out every tool we had to encourage them to keep doing it. Even a giant amount of money didn't motivate them to do it.

VAN TOFFLER: We'd launched MTV Films, and I was in search of a sketch movie. Then it hit a bunch of us: "Well, we have the franchise, and it's called Jackass."

SPIKE JONZE: Then everybody got excited again: It could be rated R!

JOHNNY KNOXVILLE: It was like someone took the chains off. Now we could do all the things we couldn't do on TV.

JOHN WATERS: Johnny broke his penis, you know. And I thought, How'd you break your penis? God, I've never heard of that!

CHRIS PONTIUS

RYAN DUNN

"We really just got lucky, you know, with the group, 'cause it all formed—all the ingredients made a good soup. We're like the Wu-Tang Clan."

"Mr. Danger"
33, Portland, OR
"It's an alter ego I created when I was young. I owned a neck brace, arm sling, leg brace, crutches, and ankle brace, and then put on that jumpsuit: Danger Ehren."

Jackass: The Movie debuted at number one on October 25, 2002, grossing nearly $23 million its first weekend. The New York Times has since called it "probably the most successful plotless movie in American film history." In 2003 MTV aired Jackass spin-offs with Steve-O and Pontius (Wild Boyz) and Margera (Viva La Bam). Next was a sequel, Number Two. It opened at number one in September 2006, and while it packs the laughs from the start, they save the best for the climax: "Terror Taxi," in which "Danger Ehren" McGhehey, dressed as an Arab suicide bomber, hails a cab, not knowing the driver (actor Jay Chandrasekhar) is in on the joke—or that his own beard is made of pubes. Jay pulls him out at gunpoint and locks him in the trunk.

JOHNNY KNOXVILLE: Yeah, when we do pranks, we always try to play it as real as possible, because usually what we're doing is a little over the top. Jay played it wonderfully, and Ehren just bought it hook, line, and sinker.

JEFF TREMAINE: The original idea was, like, "All right, how can we get someone to eat his own pubic hair?" and I think it was Preston then who said, "Well, what if we make a beard out of it? What if we did a bit where we convinced Ehren that we're gonna dress him up as a terrorist and glue this pubic hair all over his face?"

"DANGER EHREN" MCGHEHEY (cast member, writer): If I can make the world laugh by putting pubes on my face, fuck it. Pubes away.

On February 23, 2008, MTV welcomed the Jackass crew back to television for "Jackassworld.com: 24 Hour Takeover," to promote the crew's new Web site. Steve-O, whose substance abuse had gotten out of control, was kicked out of MTV's studios.

BAM MARGERA: Steve-O was pretty much 24/7 out of his mind. He'd wake up to nitrous balloons, then drink a vodka and grapefruit juice, snort a line of special K and then a line of coke, and then smoke PCP with weed in it. Seriously, anything you can think of, he would do. He was on this path of pure destruction.

JEFF TREMAINE: Steve-O was spinning off his rails. We were starting to lose him to drugs. Alcohol and drugs.

STEVE-O: I felt like the process of using all this opportunity that came with notoriety was immediately causing me to hurt people I loved.

SHANNA ZABLOW: It was a blurry line, because part of Jackass is partying. We like to go out and get wasted and have a good time. And that line got blurry with Steve-O. It was part of his persona, and what he got paid to do is be that crazy wasted guy. But he crossed the line, and it wasn't fun anymore. It got really dark and scary.

JOHNNY KNOXVILLE: He was honestly getting pretty close to death. We would have to sit him down and say, "You've got to cool it." We had to have a talk with him for putting a hit out on one of the guys who works at Jackassworld. I was like, "Steve-O, you've got to quit putting hits out. Please stop that." Steve-O wouldn't hurt a fly, but he was off his nutter then. Most of the time that fell on deaf ears, until the last time, when we took him to the psych ward.

JEFF TREMAINE: We went over and didn't negotiate with him at all. I didn't think it was going to work, but we had to at least get him to the hospital. I never fully believed he'd want to get sober. His heroes were all crash-and-burn, like Mötley Crüe. He worshiped them when they were at their worst and disrespected them for getting sober.

STEVE-O: Everyone involved in Jackass has had to put up with me being a real burden, a super-annoying guy, and it's a blessing for me to be able to work with everybody and not be that guy anymore.

JOHNNY KNOXVILLE: I'm completely blown away by how well he's doing now—so honestly proud of him and how healthy he is and how he's helping other people get sober. He's a strong motherfucker.

BAM MARGERA: It's actually funny, because he totally does the whole 12-step thing, and one of them is apologizing for all the shit-talking you've been doing. He came up on the set and went, "Hey, bro, if I ever talked any shit about you, if you feel bad about it, you can totally kick me in the nuts or punch me in the face, 'cause I totally deserve it." I broke his nose. So I guess that handles that. All is forgiven.

As with the Jaws franchise before it, the third Jackass film would be in 3D. This was in 2008, i.e., a pre-Avatar universe.

RYAN DUNN: When Tremaine called me and said he was thinking about doing another movie and told me he was doing it in 3D, I was apprehensive. I was wary of the idea, just picturing the old red-and-blue glasses and stuff. But once I started seeing the footage, I was blown away.

JOHNNY KNOXVILLE: It's like giving chimpanzees a bunch of expensive equipment.

SPIKE JONZE: The funny stuff was that much funnier. The gross stuff was that much grosser.

BAM MARGERA: It's the first time anybody has put a movie out that's 3D that isn't, like, Avatar or Clash of the Titans.

Instead, you're going to see my dick sneaking up on Chris Pontius while he's sleeping, and then all of a sudden you'll see a yellow piss stream coming out of the screen, and you'll realize it's my dick pissing on Pontius.

SHANNA ZABLOW: There's one bit in the new movie called "The Sweatsuit Cocktail." Preston walks on a StairMaster and starts to sweat. He's wearing one of those outfits athletes wear to build up sweat. Then Steve-O takes the sweat and drinks it and throws up. Puking still gets me every time. Poo I've gotten used to, especially after all these years.

JEFF TREMAINE: It's not hard to imagine us going on. Other than the fact that I've got to keep the guys alive.

DAVE ENGLAND: Obviously injuries catch up to us, but as far as our creativity and our spirit, they're strong. I'm not just saying that because I want you to go to the movie. I want you to go there and get 3D shit on your face.

VAN TOFFLER: Jackass is so much more than a succession of stunts. You couldn't explain the female appeal of Jackass if it were. It is about a bunch of guys getting off on each other.

PRESTON LACY

"I did a thing back in the series where these two dominatrices beat me up with paddles and whips. My safe word was 'Oklahoma.'"

DAVE ENGLAND

"Shit is an integral part of Jackass. I can shit on command. I don't know why other people can't."

RYAN DUNN: Yeah, you can consider us a gang. We don't have jackets or anything, but we'll be family forever.

CHRIS PONTIUS: With everything we've done, we've all said, "This is the last time," and something always happens. We get bored and want something adventurous. But I honestly don't think we'll do Jackass when we're 50.

JASON "WEE MAN" ACUÑA: I think we'll be like the Rolling Stones, doing it until we're in our 60s.

BAM MARGERA: If you're on the set, you're gonna get messed with, whether you're cast or crew. I feel so unsafe. Full-blown paranoia. If you're tired, you can't even sleep, because you'll definitely get stun-gunned or peed on. I'm sure I'll be in a wheelchair by the time I'm 40, if I even make it there.

JOHN WATERS: You know, when I retire I want to go to the Jackass nursing home. That's where I want to retire.

JEFF TREMAINE: Do I see myself doing it at 70? No, not at all. But that's not to say I won't be. We never thought we'd be doing it this long.

JOHNNY KNOXVILLE: I got in the best shape I've ever been in my life for this movie. I blew my back out over the years and it was really giving me problems, so I was exercising to get my back better. It's like wrapping a present for Christmas. You wrap it real nice and neat, and then Christmas morning you just tear the hell out of it.

HORSEPOWER: 526 · TORQUE: 649 LB.-FT. · 0-60 MPH: 4.0 SECONDS (EST.) · TOP SPEED: 155 MPH

Heads up, hard-of-hearing grandparents! We're giving you a warning: A silent killer is coming. Better start heading inside. The E-Cell is an all-electric version of the mighty SLS AMG, the snout-nosed throwback of a supercar that just started tearing up the tarmac. That car's ingenious chassis design will allow the speed geeks at Mercedes to swap in an electric power train without changing the all-aluminum body—and most important, it'll leave those badass gull-wing doors intact. Four electric motors—two on each of the axles—will work in tandem with a pack of liquid-cooled high-voltage batteries positioned directly behind the driver to instantaneously provide a sledgehammer-like 649 lb.-ft. of torque. And since it's electric, there's no clutch or gears. Transmission? Where we're going we don't need transmissions!

ENGINE: 3.8-LITER V-8 • HORSEPOWER: 600 • TORQUE: 443 LB.-FT. • 0-60 MPH: 3.4 SECONDS • TOP SPEED: 200 MPH

McLaren Automotive hasn't released its own production car since the mighty 241 mph F1 in 1998 (some still call it the best supercar the world has ever seen). So what the hell have those blokes been doing in the meantime? Building title-winning Formula One cars, that's all. Breathe easy, moneybags: Next year McLaren's getting back in the game by launching the MP4-12C, this trim street-fighting machine. Nearly all its components reap the benefits of the McLaren racing program: The body is a super-strong, weight-saving carbon-composite "MonoCell." Its homegrown 3.8-liter, twin-turbocharged V-8 is paired with a predictive Formula One-inspired dual-clutch gearbox. Its brakes even help steer out of turns. One completely awesome option box you should totally check: tiny "hero cameras" that are permanently mounted on the front and rear of the car and above the driver's right shoulder, so you can record your wickedest laps, or a particularly great order at the Wendy's drive-through window.

This slippery sportster is the coolest car built by British manufacturer Lotus since the Esprit S1 piloted by James Bond in The Spy Who Loved Me. Sure, the Elite won't turn into a submarine like Bond's Esprit, but its performance on dry land—a romp to 60 mph in just over three seconds with a couple of Bond girls in the backseat—should be enough for us, thanks. The car is part of an onslaught of sexy new rides to come from the limeys at Lotus in an effort to bring the brand back into the top tier with builders like Ferrari, Lamborghini, and Aston Martin (Bond's main modern-day ride). This hot hybrid's tricks might do just that. Two electric motors can propel the car by themselves or work in tandem with its twin-turbocharged V-8 engine to provide a push-button boost of power. Looks like Lotus is back. Best get outta the way. >>

If the term "hybrid car" evokes thoughts of the fun-killing Toyota Prius, prepare for your little mind to melt. With its next elite supercar, Porsche will flip the script on the H-word by combining a V-8 gas engine with three electric motors. The purpose? Just. Go. Faster. (Oh, yeah, and, uh, save the Earth. Heh.) The stunning speedster's 3.4-liter V-8 engine will put out a whopping 500 horsepower and work in tandem with three battery-powered electric motors to call up an additional 218 ponies anytime you click a wheel-mounted "E-Boost" button, Speed Racer-style. You'll also be able to shut the gas engine off and drive on pure battery power, allowing for one long, silent 16-mile cruise. You'll hear everything they're saying about you. >>

Translated from the Italian, Lambo's latest concept is named for the "sixth element," carbon, because its monocoque shell (stop giggling) and a majority of the car's parts—brake discs, exhaust system, even its suspension—are made from carbon composites. The ultralight, ultra-sturdy material is used for better handling, quicker acceleration, and, uh, making the Sesto Elemento look just appropriately extreme enough to be the brand's next halo car. Although Lambo hasn't announced plans to produce this exact model, we'd make a bet that both its carbon-fiber fetish and its Darth Maul-does-origami design language make it to the Bull's next-gen supercar. We think that's Awesomum. ●

THE 12 MOST DANGEROUS MEN IN THE WORLD

A

Adnan Shukrijumah

Bin Laden's new fuckhead-in-chief of terror attacks took over for the 9/11 mastermind and is believed to be responsible for a failed New York City attack in 2009. He reports directly to bin Laden.

Threat level: Adnan knows the ins and outs of America, having been raised in a Miami suburb for 15 years. Does anything good ever happen in Florida? Ever?

A

J

Nazario Moreno González, a.k.a. El Más Loco (the Craziest)

This Mexican drug lord is known for "corpse messaging": leaving dead bodies in the streets with warnings attached and rolling severed heads into rival areas.

Threat level: Even other murderous Mexicans call him El Más Loco. If you're south of the border, keep your head down (especially if one rolls past you).

Mark Zuckerberg

Despite rescinding Facebook's scary antiprivacy push, the baby-faced CEO hasn't stopped thinking about how to peddle your personal info to advertisers.

Threat level: With 500 million users and counting, you can bet on more annoying people from your past "befriending" you, then posting updates about their toddler's potty-training progress three times a day.

The Serial-Killer Truckers

The FBI says that more than 500 unsolved murders of prostitutes, hitchhikers, and stranded motorists along U.S. highways can be linked to psycho long-haul truckers who pick up victims on the interstate.

Threat level: You're probably safe unless you happen to be turning tricks at a truck stop, in which case you should probably get back to work!

10

General Butt Naked

Joshua Milton Blahyi, the former Liberian warlord, fought in the nude and devoured the hearts of slain children before battle while leading his troops to slaughter 20,000 during a bloody civil war.

Threat level: Now an evangelical preacher, General Naked has renounced his ultraviolent past, though we'd recommend scrubbing his church's pews with a Wet-Nap before sitting down.

Kim Jong Il

The nutty North Korean supreme leader has nukes to spare. On the other hand, he wears a jumpsuit and Elvis shades and keeps a stable of sexpots called the Pleasure Brigade.

Threat level: With the world's fourth largest army, this daffy despot is no joke, despite insisting that "a double rainbow appeared over the mountain" after he was born.

Christopher "Dudus" Coke

This awesomely named alleged Jamaican drug lord—whose "Shower Posse" gang has waged deadly street battles with Jamaican soldiers—was arrested in New York dressed in drag. Threat level: Not high unless you're the top tranny in whatever jail he's heading to; Coke's girly getup is impressively reminiscent of Martin Lawrence as Sheneneh.

Zydrunas Savickas

The World's Strongest Man titleholder has held 40 world records in various events and can most likely crush your head like a cantaloupe.

Threat level: If you've ever been sucked into watching World's Strongest Man contests on ESPN2, you understand the strangely hypnotic power of boulder-lifting competitions.

Robert Gleason Jr.

This convicted murderer of two people desperately wants to be executed. So much so that he told authorities at his Virginia prison that if they didn't off him, he'd kill again. They ignored his plea; true to his word, Gleason strangled another inmate with a bedsheet.

Threat level: If you've thought about stealing cable lately, let this be your "scared straight" moment.

James Arthur Ray

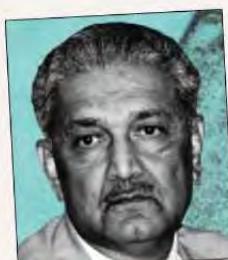

Oprah-approved self-help guru's advocacy of extreme sweat lodges allegedly led to the deaths of three followers in an ovenlike teepee.

Threat level: Now that he's facing manslaughter charges, it's unlikely Ray will be luring anyone into a 150-degree hot pocket of doom, unless you count the Dutch oven he'll probably give his cellmate.

K

A.Q. Khan

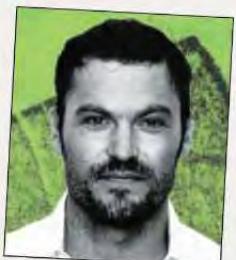

Dateline NBC said this Pakistani nuke dealer could be the "most dangerous man in the world." Impressive given that Dateline brought us the chat-room trolls of To Catch a Predator.

Threat level: If a terrorist detonates a suitcase nuke, we may have Khan to thank. But at least he's never been filmed bringing wine coolers to a 12-year-old girl's house.

Brian Austin Green

His marriage to Megan Fox suggests the 90210 alum is actually an all-powerful warlock who can shoot lasers out of his penis.

Threat level: Besides wedding the world's hottest woman, the Notorious B.A.G. lived with Tiffani-Amber Thiessen and knocked up Vanessa Marcil. Brian, for those about to touch your magic wand, we salute you.

BY PAOLO GIOVANAZZI

PHOTOGRAPHS BY NICOLA FAVARON

If there is one thing Italy's famous for the world over, it's how good their plumbers are at stomping on turtles. Also? Producing women so attractive that grown men are reduced to quivering heaps at the mere mention of them. Case in point: Melissa Satta, karate champion (ouch!), model (yay!), and gf of Italian soccer superstar Christian Vieri (ouch again!).

You've been famous in Italy for years and finally made an American splash in this year's Sports Illustrated Swimsuit Edition. Please tell us we'll be seeing more of you in the U.S. of A.

I am trying. I'm working as I do with my career in Italy. There are some things in dance, but I can't speak about it—we have to wait until commitments are set.

Is it annoying to be labeled a WAG?

It's a funny saying. If someone doesn't like it, maybe it's better they don't get engaged to a footballer, don't you think?

What's a big difference between life in Italy vs. America?

Americans are very rigorous about work. Here we seldom reach those levels.

Pics of you shopping have appeared on the Web, and you're defined as a "shoe collector." Is it true? Sure, I like shoes, but I'm not a maniac.

Can you explain to us something of women's mania for shoes that men fail to understand?

There are things that cannot be explained. It's like men's passion for soccer. Also, it is not true that men don't understand; many are equally passionate about shopping.

Guilty as charged!

ARRESTED 5/26/10

SCARFACE IN STILETTOS

ANGIE SAN CLEMENTE WAS A COLOMBIAN BEAUTY QUEEN AND TV STAR WHO AUTHORITIES SAY BECAME A CRIMINAL MASTERMIND. BUT WAS SHE REALLY A FEMALE TONY MONTANA, WITH A TEAM OF MODELS MOVING TONS OF COCAINE FROM SOUTH AMERICA TO MEXICO AND BEYOND, OR JUST AN UNLUCKY BOMBSHELL CAUGHT IN A WEB OF DECEIT? INSIDE THE RISE AND FALL OF A PINUP GIRL. BY MARK EBNER

DRUG LORD OR PRETTY FACE?
ANGIE MAINTAINS HER INNOCENCE. "I'VE NEVER STOLEN
ANYTHING, NEVER ACTED WRONG IN ANY WAY."

ON DECEMBER 13, 2009, MARIA NOEL LOPEZ IGLESIAS MADE HER WAY THROUGH EZEIZA INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT IN BUENOS AIRES, BENEATH THE GAZE OF THE SOCCER STARS AND SUPER-MODELS THAT LOOM ON GIANT BILLBOARDS HANGING FROM A VAST STEEL-RIBBED VAULT ABOVE. IT WAS THE HEIGHT OF THE TRAVEL SEASON, AND MARIA WAS HEADED FOR MEXICO CITY AND THEN ON TO CANCÚN. BY ALL APPEARANCES THERE WAS NOTHING SUSPICIOUS ABOUT THE BEAUTIFUL 21-YEAR-OLD WEAVING HER WAY THROUGH THE TERMINAL. SHE'D PASSED THROUGH SECURITY WITHOUT INCIDENT, MADE IT THROUGH CUSTOMS, AND NOW SAT AT GATE 7, WAITING TO BOARD FLIGHT 1692. WHAT COULD GO WRONG?

The plan was simple, and in fact, she'd made a practice run just 10 days before. Her boyfriend had given her a lift to the airport that morning, and a friend helped her with the two large suitcases wrapped in plastic (a common security measure taken by passengers after a scandal two years before revealed that operators allegedly stole everything from laptops to jewelry out of baggage before loading it onto outgoing flights). Besides, Maria had been assured that both here in Argentina and in Mexico, all the potential obstacles had been taken care of.

In Cancún she'd meet her Mexican contact at the airport, hand off the bags, and then head to a luxury hotel, where she could relax before dinner and a night of clubbing. In the morning it was back to Buenos Aires, several thousand dollars richer for a few days' work. Easy money.

Then came an announcement over the loudspeaker calling her to baggage claim. Maria could have just walked away, gone back home, and tried for the easy money another day. But she didn't; instead, as directed, Maria Noel Lopez Iglesias reported to baggage claim, where she was ordered to open her luggage. Inside were 50 bricks of cocaine tightly wrapped in clingy green plastic, covered in a blanket and a beach towel. The total haul was worth upwards of $3 million on the street. After being taken into custody, Maria told authorities everything she knew and was released without charges being filed. This routine drug bust, once the plot behind it began to unravel, revealed a tale that would capture the imaginations of the gossip-hungry public throughout the world. It would take five months before all the main players had been rounded up, but long before then the story of Angela Sanclemente Valencia, the "Narco Queen," was splashed across newspapers from Argentina to Australia.

MODEL-SLASH-ACTRESS-SLASH-DRUG LORD?

According to authorities, Angie Sanclemente, a Colombian beauty queen and actress, was the ringleader behind an international drug-trafficking ring that used models like Maria as drug mules. It's a story that could have been penned by Quentin Tarantino, replete with characters dubbed the Monster, the Dwarf, the Nose, the Fat Man, and the Diamond. There was Maria, the naïve looker busted at the airport; her boyfriend, Ariel Letizia, a beefy, drug-addled model-wrangler and party boy charged with hiring the smugglers; his old acquaintance Nicolas Gualco, a lean male model and international striver whose uncle was allegedly the cocaine source; and finally, there was Angie, Nicolas' fiancée, a petite exotic beauty and the alleged mastermind of the whole operation.

The basic outline was this: While working as a model and actress, Angie allegedly marries a drug-trafficking kingpin known as the Monster and stays with him just long enough to learn the tricks of the trade. After leaving him, and in concert with her new boyfriend, she launches her own operation, using her fellow models as mules. She successfully runs several tons of product out of South America, through Mexico, and on to Europe and the United States, until one of her models gets busted and the whole thing falls apart.

Angie's technique was simplicity itself. Instead of having couriers swallow condoms full of coke or disguising it as Virgin Mary statuettes or frozen mango purée, she had professional beauties pack 100 pounds of the stuff in their luggage and wear a skimpy dress through customs, where minimum-wage officials would fall all over themselves trying to expedite their clearance. It's a great story—so great that it has already inspired a Spanish-language TV series. But Angie's brazenness may have been her undoing. Even on the run with an international warrant from Interpol hanging over her head, the model-actress couldn't resist the limelight, sending Facebook messages to the media and even granting interviews. Beautiful but reckless, Angie was like Tony Montana in stilettos.

"She's a big player in the South American drug trade," according to a senior Argentine investigator, "and that's worth hundreds of millions of dollars—perhaps billions."

But the truth is as twisted as the Colombian slums in which the "Narco Queen" was raised, a story of glamour and drugs, models and crime lords, where nothing is quite what it seems.

OUT OF THE CAULDRON AND INTO THE FIRE

Angela Sanclemente Valencia was born on May 25, 1979 in Bogotá, Colombia, and raised in Barranquilla, a city of 1.7 million on the Caribbean, famous as the birthplace of such bombshells as Sofia Vergara and Shakira and where the North Coast drug cartel wreaked havoc in the '90s. In a place where sex and crime blended seamlessly and beauty was prized above all else, an ambitious girl blessed with exotic looks—a girl like Angie Sanclemente—could raise herself up and find her way in the world.

"Angie was always such a sweet girl," says her mother, Jeanneth Valencia. "She never spoke much and was always very conservative. The other girls at her school, who wore their skirts up high, would make fun of the way she dressed."

The story Jeanneth tells is of a poor but determined girl who longed to escape her station in life. Sitting in a Buenos Aires pensione, the unassuming 51-year-old is both dignified and weary, with just a trace of the beauty queen she almost was, an ambition she transferred to her only child. From early childhood Angie competed in beauty pageants, and while at 5'3" she was too short for a career as a runway model, she studied ballet, modern dance, voice, and acting. In 2000 she was crowned Colombia's "Queens of Coffee," an important step before Miss Colombia and then Miss Universe, only to be stripped of her title when it was revealed that she'd been briefly married to a businessman a decade her senior.

"She didn't know the rules," says Jeanneth. "But it was a big scandal, all over the newspapers." For girls growing up in Colombia, beauty pageants are a common childhood dream, but the criminal element was always lurking in the shadows. It was not uncommon for drug lords to sponsor contestants; according to Jeanneth, it was to avoid such entanglements that Angie decamped to Mexico.

"At the beginning it was very hard for Angie," she says. "She would work trade shows and do catalogs and beach photos for magazines. She was hungry." But before long Angie was making appearances on Mexican TV and began to indulge in Mexico City's nightlife, where models, moguls, athletes, and crime lords mixed, and where—at a club in the fall of 2008—Angie met Nicolas Gualco.

THE MODEL AND THE MONSTER

A tall, dark Argentine bearing more than a slight resemblance to Madonna's current boy toy, Jesus Luz, Nicolas had come to Mexico three years earlier. Six-foot-two, with bright blue deep-set eyes, strong, angular features, and the long unruly hair of a South American soccer star, Nicolas was the archetypal Latin lover. In addition to

THE STRANGE JOURNEY OF ANGIE SAN-CLEMENTE TOOK HER FROM COLOMBIAN "QUEEN OF COFFEE" IN 2000 (1) TO INTERNATIONAL FUGITIVE (2) IN MAY 2010. ALONG THE WAY SHE STARRED IN TV MOVIES IN MEXICO, POSED FOR COUNTLESS PHOTO SHOOTS, AND MET HER FIANCÉ, NICOLAS GUALCO (3). his work on the catwalk and in advertising campaigns, Nicolas had a sideline connecting wealthy businessmen with the willing young women in his circle. It wasn't prostitution, exactly, but it wasn't far off. He describes the Mexico City nightlife as rife with danger, where "tramps, footballers, and narcos" all mingled, and where talking to the wrong woman could get you shot. According to Nicolas, however, everything changed the night he met Angie. "It's very funny," he recalled 18 months later. "We looked at each other from across the club for two hours before I finally spoke to her. Two weeks later we were looking for an apartment together."

"Nicolas was a lonely guy, with no family [in Mexico]—nothing," says Jeanneth. "But the guy was like gold. Last Christmas Angie came to Buenos Aires to meet his family and to get married."

Court documents claim that, according to those who knew her, Angie's time in Mexico may not have been quite so innocent—that she allegedly became involved in the city's vibrant drug scene and had a second short-lived marriage, this time to the mysterious crime lord known as the Monster. A shadowy figure, variously described as Mexican or Colombian, the Monster is believed to be Victor Girao Alatrista. According to Claudio Izaguirre of the Anti-Drug Association of Argentina, Alatrista built a network smuggling cocaine base paste from Peru to Argentina, where it was refined to 98 percent pure cocaine. The Monster "organized an army of recruiters and mules, of which Angie was a key player, first in Mexico, and then in Argentina," said Izaguirre. According to authorities, Angie and her new boyfriend teamed up to run the operation out of Buenos Aires, and their trip to Argentina was for more than just planning a wedding.

A CONSPIRACY OF DUNCES

In late November, Nicolas returned to Buenos Aires for the first time in three years, and on one of his first nights back he ran into an old acquaintance from his hometown. Ariel Letizia, 25, dabbled in modeling in addition to working as a personal trainer and petty drug dealer. Nicknamed Kid Ephedrine, he lived in a trendy neighborhood and helped support himself by supplying well-to-do jet-setters with weed, cocaine, and speed.

According to Ariel's court testimony, Nicolas claimed to be involved in the drug trade and was anxious to find some girls to use as couriers. Since Ariel had a gig booking models for events in and around Buenos Aires, he was the perfect guy for the job. According to Nicolas, the girls needed to be beautiful enough to charm the customs officials but not so glamorous as to arouse suspicion. The product would allegedly come from his uncle, Daniel Monroy, but to get the drugs into Mexico and then Europe, they needed help, which was where Ariel and his girls came in. Nicolas wanted to make a shipment every 24 hours, for which he would pay $7,000 ($5,000 to the courier and a $2,000 finder's fee for Ariel). It was a good deal and, Nicolas assured him, virtually risk-free. The Mexican connection, Nicolas explained, was his fiancée, a Colombian model named Angie, who was due to arrive in Buenos Aires on December 7, 2009 to coordinate the plan.

On Saturday, November 29, Ariel arrived at the Hotel Embassy to meet with Nicolas and his uncle. The pair were eager to get going, and they asked Ariel if he'd found a girl to make a practice run. He had just the person: his girlfriend, Maria Noel Lopez Iglesias.

Just over a week later, Angie arrived in Buenos Aires on a first-class ticket with her two cats and pet Pomeranian Stuart in tow. According to Ariel, he first met the alleged queen pin at a luxury hotel five days later. Angie was sitting on the bed watching TV while Nicolas and his partner packed bricks of cocaine into two suitcases, rubbing them with soap (to throw off drug-sniffing dogs) and covering them with plastic wrap. Ariel's instructions were clear: drive his girlfriend to the appointed rendezvous and wait to cash in.

The next day, on the evening of December 13, Ariel was anxiously awaiting word from Maria. That morning he had driven her to the designated meeting place, the first step on her trip to Mexico as a drug mule. But when Maria called to report that something had gone wrong, paranoia set in. Angie ordered everyone to abandon their hotels and stand by for further instructions. So now Ariel found himself sitting at his kitchen table nervously waiting for the other shoe to drop. Suddenly there was a loud crack, and Ariel looked up to see a swarm of policemen in riot gear pouring through his front door. Leaping to his feet, Ariel bolted for the second-floor balcony and jumped, injuring his leg and rendering himself incapacitated as the police bore down. Inside Ariel's apartment, the police discovered marijuana and cocaine, and he was quickly hustled off in handcuffs and taken into custody. Then he started talking.

The story he spilled was outrageous, but just plausible enough for the authorities to believe it. Meanwhile, as news of the failed operation made its way back to Angie and the rest of the crew, they went into crisis mode. The Mexicans were demanding to know what had gone wrong, Daniel was trying to hire a lawyer, Nicolas was in a full-blown panic, and Angie was trying to manage the whole thing. In the end, they fled.

Colombian newspaper El Tiempo, ready to tell her side of the story, which was a far cry from Ariel Letizia's tale of coke-smuggling models and Mexican drug lords.

Angie claimed that on the day she arrived in Buenos Aires to meet Nicolas' family and plan her wedding, she and her fiancé traveled to Mar del Plata to visit his uncle Daniel. A hulking mixed martial artist with a buzz cut, prominent nose, and tribal tattoos snaking around his torso, Daniel was a formidable presence. Nicolas had warned Angie that his family was involved in some shady business, and after coming face-to-face with Daniel, she told Nicolas she was uncomfortable and asked to leave. Angie later discovered that her passport and return plane ticket to Mexico were missing. She reported her lost passport to the Colombian embassy but failed to mention the ticket. Part of Angie's story holds up; her plane ticket was later discovered in Daniel's possession.

Her claims of innocence notwithstanding, behind-the-scenes evidence against Angie was steadily mounting. In March, Interpol had issued a warrant for her arrest. So it wasn't just the Argentine authorities on her tail, but the world's biggest international police force. "There are some very determined and very strong women who have got more balls than the men," an Interpol investigator said at the time. "Angie kicks up dust wherever she goes. That's her nature. So we'll get her eventually."

On May 26, the day after her 31st birthday, Angie stepped into the shower at the K-Lodges hostel, the only place she felt safe from the prying eyes of an extremely hostile world. Three weeks before, Interpol had added Angie's name to their "Infra-Red" list—a compendium of 450 international fugitives for whom they actively sought public help through the Internet and social networking sites—and had received a tip about Angie from a fellow guest at the hostel. As the shower's scalding water was washing her troubles away, the authorities pounced. They allowed Angie to finish her shower and get dressed, then led her off in handcuffs. At the time of her arrest, the alleged drug lord had a grand total of $36 in her pocket.

A MODEL, IDIOT

Sitting in the Villa Devoto Detention Institute—described as "the darkest penal hellhole in all of Argentina"—Nicolas Gualco looks like a broken man. A day after Angie's arrest, he remains adamant about both his own innocence and his fiancée's. Both, he claims, are patsies who got caught up in a world beyond their comprehension. "I like luxury, to have a good life, you know. But I work for that," says Nicolas. "The real people involved in this—who were caught at the airport, who delivered drugs, who hired the girls—well, they are all free and out on the street, and the only one left in jail is me. And I'm not related to any of these guys! Everybody knows I'm not in the drug trade. I'm just a male model."

According to Nicolas, he returned to Buenos Aires from Mexico in order to plan his wedding. He admits that soon after he arrived, he met up with Ariel, his old acquaintance. "If you are in town and want drugs," says Nicolas, "Ariel is your guy." Nicolas also confirms that he drove Maria to the airport on the morning of her practice run, but claims he was in the dark as to its purpose. "Ariel asked me to take her to the airport because he was paranoid. He was whacked out on cocaine. I was hanging around, so I accompanied her."

Nicolas calls Angie a good Christian girl who helped him get off drugs, and who is not cut out for prison. They were to be married in March, then move to England. "When I came back to Argentina in November, it was to get married in the church where my parents were married," he says. "I was about to marry the woman I love, like a cheesy soap opera. Who could tell what was about to happen?"

UNHAPPILY EVER AFTER

The Ezeiza Women's Prison is located on the outskirts of Buenos Aires, just a few miles from the airport where Angie's world began to crumble. The sad, nervous woman sitting alone in the large enclosed prison yard seems almost sexless, emaciated, mostly skin and bones. It's a far cry from either the pinup queen of her posters or the Narco Queen of her legend. She is dressed in dark blue jeans, a beige sweater, and basketball sneakers.

"They don't let anybody wear black clothes in here," she says, shrugging. "And all my clothes are black."

Angie's hair is a dusky blonde and hangs loosely around her bony shoulders. The only indications of her former glamour are her eyes and hands, which are immaculately groomed, and her sparkling white teeth. The rest of her seems to vanish into thin air. "I was two months pregnant, but I lost the baby," she says. "I can't take this anymore."

While Angie steadfastly maintains her innocence, the government's case against her rests on a series of wiretaps and text messages between her alleged coconspirators and a woman called "the Diamond" immediately after the December bust. Outside of Ariel's testimony, there is no other direct evidence linking her to the case. In a text soon after the bust, Nicolas beseeched Angie to "speak with my uncle," and promised, "I will disentangle you from everything." Later Daniel placed a call to an unidentified woman with a Colombian accent who answered to the name the Diamond, asking her to smooth things over with the Mexicans. On January 6, Daniel and Nicolas were both arrested. Based on certain terms of endearment used in the texts and a voice analysis of the wiretap, the authorities claim that the Diamond is in fact Angie. By establishing an intermediary link between Daniel and Nicolas on the one hand and the Mexican connection on the other, the government infers that Angie—the Diamond—was supervising the entire operation.

According to an Interpol investigator, "Several female drug mules we've arrested in recent times have direct links to Sanclemente. A few have negotiated reduced sentences for information that they've been recruited to carry cocaine on flights out of Argentina to other markets.

"We've been looking at her activities for a considerable time, and, based on those who've squealed, she's running a big operation."

While hardly an airtight case, it may not matter. Angie says she is broke, without a lawyer, and powerless to fight the charges against her. Facing up to 16 years behind bars, today she spends most of her time scrubbing toilets or cooking for the 13 other women in her cell-block. She is openly frightened of the rest of the prison population; it's widely assumed that she has a lot of money stashed away, and her fellow prisoners want a piece.

"They blame everything on me because I am from Colombia—that's the reason I'm here. The judge, too! He thinks, Well, she's Colombian and lived in Mexico, and that's it!" she says. "I have nothing against Argentina. It's a beautiful country, and my boyfriend is Argentine, but I'm having the most horrible moment in my life."

As the reality of her predicament sinks in, Angie starts to cry. "I've lived my life without any trouble," she says, sobbing. "If you could investigate my life a little bit more, it's not like this, I swear to you. I can't comprehend this! I have never stolen, never acted the wrong way. Meanwhile the real criminals are back on the streets committing felonies. Why?"

And with that the beauty queen turned alleged Narco Queen composes herself. The crying stops, she says her goodbyes, and as a plane leaving Ezeiza International Airport flies overhead, Angie Sanclemente Valencia is led back into the prison.

NO LONGER AN INTERNATIONAL GLAMOUR MODEL, ANGIE SANCLEMENTE TODAY FACES UP TO 16 YEARS BEHIND BARS.

WHETHER OLD OR NEW, AMERICAN BRANDS ARE DRAWING ON THE PAST AND LOOKING TO THE

LEVI'S

FOUNDED: 1853 BY LEVI STRAUSS, SAN FRANCISCO, CA

Why you care: Because sometimes the original is the best, and for a century and a half no brand has better evoked America's working-class heroics.

Philosophy: "Given the economy, people are looking for comfort through stability, items that are built to last from brands with time-tested track records," says director of brand concepts Carl Chiara, who has been with the grand-daddy of denim brands since 1995. "With the fall 2010 collection, we went back to the very beginning, when jeans and the 501 were workwear. We took those roots, complete with a slew of historic functional details, and applied them to suit and fit the functionalities and needs of today's guy."

PENDLETON

FOUNDED: 1863 BY THOMAS L. KAY, PORTLAND, OR

Why you care: Because despite Pendleton's rustic history, teaming up with brands like Opening Ceremony, Hurley, Nike, and Vans has helped the company reach new fans seeking to rock out like mountain men or beach bums.

Philosophy: "Our founder, Thomas Kay, brought his love of tartans with him from Britain, which became our iconic plaid shirts," says Jim Buckner, manager of menswear. "But our first customers—American Indians—will always influence our approach to patterning." And Pendleton has had plenty of influence itself: "In the early 1960s, a group of kids formed a band called the Pendletones, after our woolen shirts. They eventually changed their name...to the Beach Boys."

MICHAEL BASTIAN

FOUNDED: 2006 BY MICHAEL BASTIAN, NEW YORK CITY

Why you care: Because as the fashion director at New York style mecca Bergdorf Goodman, Bastian had firsthand knowledge of what customers want, and with his own line he's putting his know-how into practice.

Philosophy: "Before everything crashed economically, we'd been in this period of 10 or 15 years of high designer fashion: the slim black suit and the skinny tie, everything branded, and everyone striving for this fashion look," says Bastian. "I think we've all been shaken up, and as the dust settles we're looking around us, and what we're seeing is America." The result is a timeless line perfect for a weekend in the country or a night on the town.

SIMON SPURR

FOUNDED: 1996 BY SIMON SPURR, NEW YORK CITY

Why you care: Because after stints with classic American brands like Calvin Klein and Ralph Lauren, the British-born Spurr knows how to craft both Savile Row-worthy suits and denim that'll last you forever.

Philosophy: "I design products that make guys feel comfortable and look good. There's a reality and a functionality to the clothes," says Spurr. "It's a slimmer-fitting, cleaner product than you'd associate with a European brand, but I was heavily influenced by American denim brands like Levi's, Wrangler, and Lee." And take this tip when purchasing a pair of his seriously addictive jeans: "Buy the correct size, which is often a size smaller than what you're buying now."

WOOLRICH WOOLEN MILLS

FOUNDED: 1830 BY JOHN RICH, WOOLRICH, PA

Why you care: Because certain staples like rugged parkas and buffalo plaid flannel shirts look as good on Johnny Depp or Jay-Z as on Paul Bunyan, proving that some things never go out of style.

Philosophy: "We are the longest continuously operating outdoor apparel manufacturer in the United States, ever since our founder was selling wool to lumberjacks and sawmill workers out of a mule cart," says executive VP Brian Mangione of the 180-year-old brand. "One of the Woolrich classics, the arctic parka, was worn by workers building the Alaskan pipeline," notes creative director Andrea Crane. "So we updated the fit and reinvented the jacket for the modern man."

L.L.BEAN

FOUNDED: 1912 BY LEON LEONWOOD BEAN, FREEPORT, ME

Why you care: Because you're going for the perfect blend of Hemingway and Alex P. Keaton. Rag sweaters, duck boots—no one does the rugged-prepster look better, or more affordably, than L.L.Bean.

Philosophy: "L.L. once said, 'If you get lost, go back to camp,' and I think a lot of brands are looking to 'home base' to be reminded of their identity," says Alex Carleton, the creative director who's giving the label a modern update with the L.L.Bean Signature line. "We possess nearly a century of brand history, so we look at the present and are inspired by the future, but we use the past as the framework for building the brand."

BILLY REID

FOUNDED: 2004 BY BILLY REID, FLORENCE, AL

Why you care: Because by melding high style and classic workwear—the rugged and the refined—this Southern boy conquered the Big Apple fashion scene.

Philosophy: "My favorite brands make things that you can own forever and will look better with age. It's a timeless quality that's very American," says Reid, who recently launched collaborations with Levi's and Stetson. "I start with pieces I personally want and build from there, things that have the versatility to wear in the two worlds in which I spend most of my time: Alabama and New York. If the piece can translate well in both, then we've hit our target."

CAULFIELD PREPARATORY

FOUNDED: 2009 BY VINCENT FLUMIANI, LOS ANGELES, CA

Why you care: Because like its namesake Catcher in the Rye character, the Caulfield line—with its distressed fabrics, wrinkled button-downs, and frayed hems—harks back to a golden age of prep.

Philosophy: "I grew up in a very conservative upper-middle-class society; there were rules, but I got really good at putting my own twist on things," says designer Vincent Flumiani. "Caulfield Preparatory is very much that. It's got this obviously ingrained Waspish middle-class American attitude to it, but I like to mix shit up a little bit. And break some rules."

Why you care: Because since launching their "men's store" in 2008, J.Crew has done the work for you—not only with their own ruggedly preppy staples but also through the other classic brands they carefully curate and stock.

Philosophy: "Traditionally, guys aren't shoppers, so we try to make their lives easier by offering edited selections of our favorite styles and brands," says designer Frank Muytjens. "We're not too precious in what we design: masculine, tough, but elegant. Americana gives everything a purpose, with truly functional details, so everything we do is a product of that, a product of our heritage."

GITMAN BROS.

FOUNDED: 1978 BY ALFRED AND SHELDON GITMAN, ASHLAND, PA

Why you care: Because the legendary masters of the perfect button-down—who have long been churning out classics for other labels—have retooled their own brand with the Vintage line, featuring slimmer fits and shorter cuts.

Philosophy: "The renewed interest in Americana is a reaction to big-brand global capitalism—local 'made in the U.S.A.' quality trumps global quantity," says Chris Oberding, creative director of Gitman Vintage. "I'm not a designer, though; I've been with Gitman for a while, working on shirt production with Burberry and Thom Browne. I'm really more of a curator of the archive."

Since opening in 2005, Ryan Huber and Sam Parker have offered denim addicts the very best. "Guys are becoming more interested in where and how things are made and less interested in sweatshop garbage," says Huber. "U.S. brands are proud of their heritage, and we show that to our customers."

FOUNDED: 2002 BY MARCUS WAINWRIGHT & DAVID NEVILLE, NEW YORK CITY

Why you care: Because these darlings of style mavens and rock stars alike have found the perfect combination of traditional rustic staples, impeccable tailoring, and quirky downtown detailing.

Philosophy: "We make as many of the garments as possible here in the States and constantly look to the roots of Americana—the workwear and denim heritage," says cofounder Wainwright. "But neither of us has any background in design," adds Neville. "I was an investment banker in London, and Marcus owned a telecommunications business."

STEVEN ALAN

FOUNDED: 1999 BY STEVEN ALAN, NEW YORK CITY

Why you care: Because while the New York native designed what may well be the ultimate button-down shirt—slightly rumpled, slightly snug, and best left untucked—the rest of his clothes and accessories are just as addictive.

Philosophy: As Alan has noted, "Everything came out of the shirt," which quickly became the must-have garment for every guy who wanted to look stylish but not like he cared. "I think about different designers and how they developed, but for me there's this certain sloppy schoolboy look that I grew up with."

Guitar Watch

The Official Watch of Rock and Roll

Rock around the clock tonight with the exclusive Stauer 6-String Watch for under $100!

As a kid, I stood hypnotized in front of the guitar shop window. I stared at the Gibsons, Fenders, Rickenbackers and Les Pauls, lined up like lacquered mahogany and maple trophies. With their smooth curves, each one could produce hot licks, reverb and a wailing solo. The six string guitar is the heart of rock and roll. I'm proud to say that today I feel the same way about the new Stauer 6-String timepiece.

We wanted to give our favorite vintage electric guitars their due with an impressive timepiece that captures the excitement of the golden years of rock and roll. The Stauer 6-String is a legendary timepiece with bold, head-turning design and attitude to spare. It's rebellious enough to feel like you're getting away with something.

Meet your new favorite rock star. My only advice to the designers was to make a watch that looks exactly like rock and roll sounds. Big, bold and loud enough to wake the neighbors. It should evoke images of Bill Haley, Buddy Holly, The King and The Boss strumming crowds into a frenzy.

But it should also reverberate with the spirit of the world's greatest rock guitar gods like Jimi, Eric and Keith (who was featured on the cover of the Rolling Stone magazine wearing a Stauer watch). As you can see, the final product is worthy of a standing ovation.

It's only rock and roll, but we like it. One look at the Stauer 6-String voluptuous stainless steel body will bring you right back to the glory days of 45 and 33 rpm records. The eye-catching shape of the case recalls the round-bottomed bodies of the greatest vintage electric guitars.

The unique, ivory face features blue Roman numerals on the left of the dial and bold Arabic numbers on the right. Blued, Breguet-style hands keep time while additional complications mark the day, date and month. A date window sits at the 3 o'clock position. Inside, the 27-ruby-jewel movement utilizes an automatic self-winding mechanism that never needs batteries. The watch secures with a genuine black leather band and is water-resistant to 3 ATMs.

Guaranteed to rock your world. If you aren't fully impressed by the performance and stage presence of the Stauer 6-String within 30 days, simply return the watch for a full refund of the purchase price. The unique design of the 6-String limits our production to only 4,995 pieces, so don't hesitate to order! Sorry, no Wah Wah pedal included!

WATCH SPECS:

- Stainless steel case - 27-jewel automatic movement
- Date, day and day/night complications
- Croc-embossed leather strap fits 6 3/4"-8 3/4" wrist

CHRIS PINE

THE UNSTOPPABLE STAR—AND NEW CAPTAIN KIRK—MULLS HIS LAST DAY.

So how do you want to go?
Smiling.

Do you have any deathbed confessions as you face the "final frontier"?
I'm an avid procrastinator.

Where will you be going, heaven or hell?
I'll steam downstairs and do the cold plunge upstairs.

The train conductor you play in Unstoppable gets into some pretty dangerous situations. Have you ever had any near-death experiences in your own line of work?

Tripping while eating my breakfast burrito on the way to the makeup trailer.

Between you and your costar Denzel Washington, who would more likely be able to save a town from a lethal disaster without dying in the process?

Dunno. But he just may be able to beat me in an act-off.

Who would you rather kick it with in the afterlife, Denzel or Spock?
Denzel. Playing Spock.

James T. Kirk was a reckless man. What's the biggest trouble you've gotten into during your lifetime?
Tough call...but I'm betting a lady was involved.

You've had the good fortune to romance some very lovely ladies on-screen (Anne Hathaway, Lindsay Lohan, Rosario Dawson). Any one in particular you'd like to be stranded in a wormhole with?

Can't I have a wormhole harem?

What are Trekkies saying over your casket?
"I never thought Bill would do it."

You have a college degree in English. What literary quote would you like on your tombstone?
"Fuckin' Ruthie, fuckin' Ruthie, fuckin' Ruthie, fuckin' Ruthie..."

Unstoppable rolls into theaters November 12.
